THE INQUISITION AGAINST PETER DE CASTRO,
VICAR OF THE DOMINICAN PROVINCE OF THE HOLY LAND,
IN NICOSIA, CYPRUS, 1330

BY
CHRISTINA KAOULLA AND CHRISTOPHER SCHABEL*

Professor Jean Richard has already drawn attention to the curious episode of the inquisition conducted by two Dominican masters of theology – Peter of Palude, patriarch of Jerusalem, and Bishop Mark of Famagusta and Tortosa – against the Dominican provincial vicar of the Holy Land, Peter de Castro, for among other things imprisoning a papal legate, the Dominican Arnald de Fabricis, in the Nicosia convent of the Friars Preacher.¹ The events took place in December 1329 and January 1330, while the inquisition was held in the Dominican convent later that year. Here we offer an edition of the complete inquisition record, from manuscript Instrumentum Miscellaneum 4588 of the Archivum Secretum Vaticanum.² In addition to the intrinsic interest of the inquisition itself, the complete record is significant for the light it sheds on the life of the convent in 1330 and the relationship between the Dominicans and their great patron, King Hugh IV Lusignan of Cyprus (1324-59). In this introduction, building on Richard's work,³ we shall provide some background concerning the convent, attempt to reconstruct the events that took place there in late 1329 and early 1330, and describe the inquisition itself.

The Nicosia Convent of the Dominicans⁴

Our only source for the foundation of the convent is the sixteenth-century account of the Cypriot Dominican author Etienne de Lusignan. Despite some errors, it is probably true that Alice of Montbéliard, the wife of the regent of Cyprus, Philip of Ibelin, founded the convent around 1226, most likely just west of Alice's other establishment, the Cistercian nunnery of St Theodore, to the west of the medieval city.⁵ The Nicosia Dominicans were already involved in a quarrel with King Henry I's chancellor in 1248. We also know that the convent was receiving bequests by 1300 and that it had a functioning school by 1306.⁶ In his will, King John I (1284-85) left an annual donation to the Franciscans, Carmelites, and Dominicans, under certain unknown conditions that the friars found unacceptable. In 1295 Pope Boniface VIII gave leave to Henry II (1285-1324) to dispose of this money as he saw fit, with the approval of the executors. Henry's decision was apparently not to give the mendicants the money. Thus, in 1308, his brother Amaury de Lusignan, a usurper who had taken over after a coup d'état in 1306 and probably sought ecclesiastical support for his disputed rule, wanted to provide the Dominicans with a new place, as King John had wished "but could not fulfill because of his death." V approved their transfer because "their location is so far removed from the city of Nicosia that on account of this distance the fruits of their preaching and the curing of souls are much impeded."⁷ Thus, after 1308 the Dominicans were in a new location.

The buildings of the new convent were destroyed in 1567 when the Venetians, who had annexed the island in 1489, decided with the leading citizens to build new city walls with a reduced perimeter, a measure that failed to stop the Ottomans from taking the city three years later. The convent, next to and finally combined with the Lusignan royal palace, was one of Nicosia's greatest architectural treasures. Beginning with King Hugh IV, the Lusignans and other nobles showered it with gifts and chose it as their sepulcher, so that it has been called the "St Denis" of Cyprus. With the death of Hugh IV in 1359, every monarch and most members of the royal house were buried there until the death of King John II in 1458, giving it a total of twenty-four major tombs.⁸

The lavish elements of the Dominican convent may have dated from the first years of the reign of Hugh IV. When Hugh came to power in 1324 the Roman Dominican John of Conti (1312-32) was archbishop of Nicosia. Perhaps with Hugh's support, Conti constructed a chapel of St Thomas Aquinas in the cathedral by 1326, just three years after the Angelic Doctor's canonization. Hugh may even have named his son Thomas after Aquinas, who had dedicated his De regno to King Hugh II. In 1335 Hugh IV had two Dominicans serving in his own chapel, and two Dominican patriarchs of Jerusalem lived in the Dominican convent at some point in the early years of Hugh's reign, both Parisian masters of theology: Raymond Bequini, who was appointed in 1324 and died in Cyprus in 1328, and his successor, Peter of Palude, who was involved in the inquisition. Although Hugh would not have been able to influence

Richard, "Comment," p. 51, n. 2, who also notes this transferral, hypothesizes that King John's initial conditions included the foundation of new convents.

Bequini's appointment, the King loved theologians and it is quite possible that he asked for another important Dominican master after Bequini's death.⁹

At this time the convent probably abutted the royal palace, perhaps just south of the present Paphos Gate, over a branch of the seasonal Pediasios River, and in King Peter II's reign (1369-82) the palace and convent merged. In 1394, the convent was described as having "two cloisters, one large and the other small," but better descriptions come from two Dominicans: the traveller Felix Faber (1483) and Etienne de Lusignan. Unlike the royal palace, the conventional buildings and church of the Dominican convent escaped the destruction of the Genoese and Mamluk invasions in 1373-74 and 1424-26 respectively and remained intact inside the walls of the ruined palace. The church, full of all those tombs, was "right royally adorned," the two cloisters were fitted with marble pillars, and one of the two dormitories, on the second level of the conventional buildings, and the refectory, on the ground level, were paved with marble. The entire complex was surrounded by gardens and orchards.¹⁰

It is likely that this description reflects the situation in 1329-30, although much construction must have still been in progress, given that only two decades had passed since the convent's relocation. During the inquisition the main cloister and the sacristy, chapterhouse, cells, prison, garden, and orchard are mentioned on various occasions.

There are many references to the two levels of the conventional buildings: a prisoner was transferred "de loco superiori ad inferiorem" [§150 in the edition below], the nuncios had a room below the roof [§§25, 36] and descended to the chapterhouse [§168], and the tailor in his workroom went to the cloister roof upon hearing some commotion [§188]. The infirmary is also cited numerous times [e.g., §§31, 36, 58, 168], and perhaps it contained the small cloister mentioned in 1394. Likewise, the church, with its choir, had been built and King Hugh IV was already frequenting services.

Etienne de Lusignan claims that the convent had eighty friars in its heyday,¹¹ which would correspond to the time of the inquisition. In the inquisition record approximately thirty residents of the convent are mentioned by name – from Ancona, Cyprus, Gascony, Savoy, England, Rieti, Poitou, Aragon, etc. – and there were many more. Although Patriarch Peter of Palude was given the administration of the Church of Limassol, one of Nicosia's suffragan sees, he preferred to live in the capital in his Order's convent, to be near the center of political and ecclesiastical power. When Peter arrived on Cyprus, he was accompanied by six learned Dominicans and his regular household, which no doubt increased in size. For example, Peter was allowed to make six notaries in Cyprus.¹² With the administration of the Holy Land province housed at the convent, various Dominican missionaries stopping on their way to the East, and the numerous servants required to run the institution, the Dominican house in Nicosia may have accommodated over one hundred people when the events of late 1329 began to unfold.

The Events of 1329-1330

In 1329, then, the Nicosia convent of the Dominicans was at the height of its glory. The Kingdom of Cyprus was at its zenith, after the influx of refugees from the Latin East following the fall of Acre and other crusader cities by 1291, enjoying the tremendous prosperity that resulted from the Cypriot exploitation of the papal ban on direct trade with the Muslims. Soon that ban would be relaxed entirely, the Black Death would weaken the island, and invasions from Genoa and Egypt would deal further blows. Hugh IV, perhaps the greatest of the Lusignan dynasty that ruled from 1192 to 1489, was the Dominicans' strongest supporter, and famous Dominicans were passing through as well.¹³

Using the inquisition record, papal letters, and other sources, we can attempt to reconstruct what happened in late 1329 and early 1330.¹⁴ Having received their assignment in 1327, by 26 May 1328, Peter de Manso, canon of Nicosia, and the Dominican Arnald de Fabricis (Fabrégués in the vernacular) were in Cyprus acting as papal nuncios, dealing with an issue involving the bishop of Famagusta and the Greek monks of the monastery of St Catherine of Mt Sinai, concerning the chapels of La Cava and St Catherine near Famagusta [41388]. Peter de Manso settled in a house in Nicosia, whilst his associate, Arnald de Fabricis, took up residence in the convent of the Order of Friars Preacher in Nicosia. Peter de Manso had been given an expectant canonry in Nicosia Cathedral on 15 May 1327 [28736], not be confused with the Peter Mansel given an expectant benefice in Nicosia on 10 April 1323 [17170], but whether he was resident in Cyprus at that time is unknown. In 1328 Pope John XXII assigned to nuncios Peter de Manso and Arnald de Fabricis the business of the establishment of two new houses of Augustinian Hermits, presumably in Famagusta and Limassol, since Nicosia already had its convent [41573]. On 1 August of that year Peter de Manso was described as dean of Paphos when the pope told him and Arnald to investigate a matter concerning the important Benedictine abbey of Stavrovouni, about a day's journey to the south of Nicosia [42057]. By the time of the inquisition and perhaps by December 1329 [§31], Peter was also cantor of Burgos in Spain, and with that title in 1331 he and Arnald were involved in an issue concerning the wealthy Cistercian abbey of Beaulieu, just outside Nicosia [52555]. By late 1332, Peter and Arnald were no longer nuncios in Outremer [59059], and Peter, at least, died sometime between 18 April and 6 August 1333.¹⁵

Meanwhile, James de Farges was serving as prior provincial of the Dominican province of the Holy Land following his election, probably replacing the vicar Anselm de Silvano, from the province of Lombardy, who had been appointed by the Dominican General Chapter of 1325 after the removal of the previous prior provincial. Then, at the General Chapter of 1329, James de Farges in turn was removed from duty and Peter de Castro was appointed vicar general until the election and confirmation of the new provincial.¹⁶ According to various depositions at the inquisition, Peter de Castro and the Dominican definitor, on the advice of prudent Dominicans, sentenced and imprisoned James for his many "demerita," "excessus," and "culpae" against the rules of the Order, although we do not know if this was related to James' removal from office [§§8, 25, 31, 127].

On some unspecified date in early or mid-December 1329, in the morning before breakfast, Peter de Manso and Arnald de Fabricis descended from Arnald's room high up in the convent down to the chapterhouse, where they had a notary ring the usual bell to summon the friars to the chapter. When the friars had gathered there, the nuncios asked the vicar, Peter de Castro, and the prior of Nicosia, Thomas de Marchia, to release James de Farges from prison and to bring him before them because they wanted to question him on some affairs [§§31, 36, 75, 111, 168], which we are later told had some connection with a papal decree "De Falsariis," probably involving forged papal letters [§127]. When this did not work, the nuncios ordered that this be done in the name of the pope [§§31, 111].

We are not told any other details about the nature of their inquiry, nor do we know for what crimes exactly James de Farges was incarcerated. Although there is no direct evidence, perhaps it is connected to a quarrel involving Famagusta. On 14 October 1328 [43118, 43119], Pope John XXII wrote to Arnald and Peter de Manso (here dean of "Pacen," i.e., Badajoz in Spain), ordering them to restore to the newly installed Bishop Mark of Famagusta and Tortosa a list of items: slaves that were cultivating and working the lands of the Church of Famagusta, whom Mark and his predecessor, variously described as precentor [43135], cantor [52555; 59059], and canon [60095] of Burgos down to April 1333. On 6 August of that year, following his death, his canonry, prebend, and position of cantor were assigned to someone else [60916]. Peter de Manso also had a claim to a canonry and prebend in Famagusta, which were reassigned in September 1333 [61383].

¹⁶ Acta capitulorum generalium ordinis praedicatorum, ed. B.M. Reichert, 9 vols., Rome 1898-1904, vol. II, pp. 159-160 and 192.

Baldwin, had acquired, in addition to camels, cart horses, and pack horses, without which that church could not function; arms for the defense of that church and the city of Famagusta, which Baldwin and his predecessors had recuperated from people who were detaining them; seven copes and some ornaments that Mark had had made for the service of that church out of some gold cloths found among the goods of Baldwin, which had been used in that church for a long time; and several books and other movable and immovable goods that had been Baldwin's. Peter de Manso and Arnald had sequestered all of these things, to the detriment of that church. Since we learn from another letter of the same date [43122] that Bishop Mark was actually a Dominican master of theology, we at least know that the nuncios were in a conflict involving an important local Dominican.¹⁷

This was not the only time the nuncios were involved in the property of Dominican theologians, however. Peter of Palude was made patriarch of Jerusalem on 27 March 1329, following the death of his confrere Raymond Bequini in Cyprus [44849], succeeding the latter also as administrator of Limassol [44850; §6]. Palude arrived in Cyprus when the struggle between Peter de Castro and Arnald de Fabricis had already begun,¹⁸ but on 12 June 1329, even before Palude set off for the island, the pope ordered the Dominican archbishop of Nicosia and the Dominican bishop of Famagusta to support the Dominican Palude against the nuncios Peter de Manso and the Dominican Arnald de Fabricis, since they had seized various things of the late Dominican Raymond, including casalia – villages [45362].¹⁹ So when the nuncios went to the Dominican chapterhouse that December morning demanding the release of James de Farges for questioning, it is possible that a Dominican dispute over forged papal letters dealing with property and money was connected.

Peter de Castro, the vicar, and Thomas de Marchia, the prior, replied that they were not obliged “prima facie” to obey the nuncios, because they were immediate subjects of the Apostolic See and exempt from the nuncios’ jurisdiction. They would only obey if the nuncios showed them an apostolic privilege proving that they had the authority to ‘order the prisoner’s release. The nuncios answered that the vicar and prior were obliged to release James, and they read a document that stated that they must do so in all obedience and on pain of excommunication. The vicar asked the nuncios for a copy of the document and asked the notary Francis de Salexedo to put it in public form, but the nuncios refused. For their part, the nuncios apparently ordered the notary to draw up a document recording the refusal of the vicar and prior to release James de Farges. An acrimonious argument between the two sides ensued, during which the nuncios had the notary read some articles against the vicar [§§10, 31, 132].

Eventually Peter de Castro is said to have told the nuncios, "I will deliberate and answer you presently," ordering the friars in the chapterhouse to follow him into the church by virtue of obedience. The nuncios, in contrast, told the friars not to follow Peter de Castro and tried to stop them. Some of the Dominicans followed the vicar and the others remained with the nuncios, among them Robert the Englishman, Geoffrey of Poitiers, Peter of Aragon, Peter of Montegrosso, and Robert of Saint-Denis [§§31, 36, 75, 111, 132].

When Peter de Castro returned, he found that the nuncios had not waited for him. Instead Peter de Manso and Arnald de Fabricis went searching for the lay brother John of Savoy in order to get the key to the prison, ordering the friars with them to accompany them [§36, 75]. According to John of Savoy himself, the nuncios asked and then ordered him to hand over the key on behalf of the pope and on pain of excommunication. John did not dare, but eventually he raised his hands and replied: "Here's the key, but I don't dare give it to you." Then Arnald reached out and grabbed John's belt, taking the key by force from the string attached to the belt [§§31, 36, 57, 75, 111-112, 209].

With the key in their possession, the nuncios proceeded to the prison in the company of their associates, among them two notaries, Master Raymond and Master Arnald, whom the nuncios ordered to open the door. One of the notaries called to James de Farges to come out, and the group then led him to the infirmary, probably nearby, and gave him meat to eat, without the permission of the vicar and the prior [§§31, 36, 57-58, 112, 132, 168, 209]. Immediately upon his release James de Farges apparently announced his intention to appeal to the pope and asked Master Raymond to draw up the document [§123]. Then in the infirmary James de Farges stood talking with the nuncios while the notary was writing the appeal. Afterwards James read aloud the charter of his appeal near the infirmary door, in the presence of the nuncios, the two notaries, and some friars and servants of the house [§§58, 165, 168-169, 224-225, 239].

One of the charges against Peter de Castro later on was that he had disregarded this appeal. Thus in the inquisition there was some question about whether Peter de Castro ever learned of the appeal, officially or unofficially. Half of the witnesses, including Peter himself, claimed to have known nothing at all about it [§§29, 34, 42, 72, 107, 185, 205, 248, 258]. Others heard it from others, sometimes second hand, almost always without naming names [§§89, 149, 165, 239]. Donnino of Parma heard it from the nuncios and via some Dominican associates of the archbishop, who said that they had heard it from other friars [§240]. In Robert of Saint-Denis' cell, perhaps the same day, James told Robert and Simon de Vienna that he had appealed [§273]. John of Savoy declared that he had heard and witnessed the appeal himself, however, claiming that fifteen days later he heard some friars telling James de Farges: "Revoke it! Revoke the appeal, because the vicar will show you mercy." This he did in the presence of the former vicar Anselm de Silvano and others, and this revocation was known indirectly to two other witnesses. Richard the Englishman, perhaps the same as Robert, asserted that he heard from friars whose names he could not recall that Peter de Castro actually brought James down from his place of incarceration above to revoke the appeal [§§89, 123, 150]. The Greek servant Carnavabus suspiciously gives the most information: the notaries, Masters Raymond and Arnald, told him that James de Farges was appealing, something he later "saw" in Arnald's room, and he heard both nuncios ordering the notaries to inform Peter de Castro about the appeal. Carnavabus also stated that the notaries went to the chapter to announce it to the vicar, although he did not witness this [§225-227].

From the infirmary the nuncios escorted James de Farges to Arnald de Fabricis' room on the upper level, below the roof of the convent [§§25, 58, 75]. Richard the Englishman claims that James spent the night in Arnald de Fabricis' room, although this probably means just the evening on which the below events occurred [§131].

Several attempts were made to secure the return of James de Farges. Peter de Castro appears to have first sent Thomas de Marchia, the prior, to Arnald de Fabricis' room to demand that they hand over James de Farges, but the nuncios refused [§§31, 36]. At some point the vicar and the friars had a meeting about how to respond to what they considered the violence done to the Order and themselves. They decided to go to King Hugh to ask for secular assistance. The vicar, the prior, and other friars went to the king and told him what had happened, showing him a privilege by which they could ask for secular assistance when necessary and requesting his help against the nuncios. The king, wishing to observe the privileges granted to them by the Apostolic See, agreed [§31, 36]. Meanwhile the nuncios told Arnald the porter that if Peter de Castro came back to the convent, the porter should tell the vicar to come speak with the nuncios [§168].

The vicar returned to the convent in the evening after Complines, accompanied by some well-armed sergeants whom the vicar left in the cloister. The vicar sent various friars up to Arnald de Fabricis' room to ask and warn the nuncios to return James de Farges, who was supposed to come to the chapterhouse, but to no avail. Prior Thomas went to Arnald's room a second time with the older friars and repeated the demand, but again they refused, claiming that they had to question James on the pope's behalf on matters pertaining to a papal decree "De falsariis," after which – according to Richard the Englishman, who was generally opposed to Peter de Castro – they would return him. The vicar was not satisfied and went in person with other friars to the room and demanded the same thing. He is said to have gone in person more than four times, in fact. The nuncios replied that he was not their superior and that they were not obliged to obey him. The vicar also discovered that the door of the room was locked [§§25, 31, 36, 55, 75, 92, 110, 127, 153, 169, 188, 261, 265].

Finally, the angry vicar and other friars – among them Thomas de Marchia, Richard the Englishman, Simon de Vienna, the lay brother Francis of Cyprus, and the bishop of Santorini – went to the room to repeat the demand, accompanied by the armed men. The Greek servant Carnavabus, who was inside the room at the time, colorfully related that Thomas de Marchia (here called "of Ancona") said, "Open the door!" Arnald de Fabricis replied, "I will not open the door, because I don't know who those men are." The nuncio continued: "I demand on behalf of the pope and the king of Cyprus that you not break down the door, because the treasury, documents, and goods of our lord pope are here." Witnesses claimed that the room contained money, baskets, cases, the furniture of the nuncios, silver goblets and pots, books, and paper documents (perhaps protests and appeals, thought Simon de Vienna). ("When asked how he knew that they were the lord pope's goods, [Carnavabus] replied: 'Because what Friar Preacher, unless he's a prelate, has so many denarii and so much money?'" [§214].) Besides Arnald de Fabricis himself, James de Farges, and Peter de Manso, who was staying there that night, in the room at the time were the servants Carnavabus and Johanninus (= Greek Ioannakis?), three notaries – Master Raymond, Master Arnald, and apparently John Calhaferius – and Peter de Manso's nephew, who may have been a notary himself [§§115, 127, 136, 155, 170-171, 174, 188-189, 208, 213, 263, 266].

While the vicar was talking with Arnald de Fabricis, who was inside and replying through the door, the armed sergeants asked: "Shall we go?" and the vicar replied: "Yes." (According to Richard the Englishman, who was present but appears unsympathetic to the vicar, some friars pleaded with Peter de Castro not to break in, fearing that it would create a scandal.) The sergeants broke the door and forced entry into the room violently and with hostility. Turmoil! The armed men unsheathed their swords while entering the room, because they mistakenly thought that other armed men were in the room who would attack them, but they struck no one. With weapons in their hands they grabbed Arnald de Fabricis and Peter de Manso, not knowing who James de Farges was. When Peter de Castro entered, according to the Greek Carnavabus, James read a charter he had in his hand, in the presence of the vicar, the bishop of Santorini, and Thomas de Marchia, and said, "I have made my appeal to the Lord Pope." Thomas de Marchia said to the armed men: "He's not one of them," or: "Don't seize Brother Arnald – because he's not the one, but seize that one," indicating James de Farges, and they let the nuncios go. Although Peter de Castro asserted that they did not lay a hand on James de Farges, the porter Arnald saw that four or five armed men took James by the head, legs, and arms, dragged him out of the room, and led him back to prison in a different, much less comfortable room (although Richard the Englishman said it was the same room as before) [§§25, 36, 55-56, 110, 127, 130, 157, 169, 208, 211, 215, 261, 273]. The witnesses agreed that this was done without damaging the goods and documents that were in Arnald de Fabricis' room and without physically harming James de Farges or the nuncios. Some emphasized that the vicar's intent was not to offend the nuncios, but only to return James to prison [§§31, 36-37, 56, 59, 77].

The following day Arnald de Fabricis left the convent and went to the house of the Hospitallers in Nicosia, arranging for all the contents of his room in the Dominican convent to be transported to the Hospitallers [§§25, 32, 38]. During Arnald's absence, which lasted several days, Peter de Castro made various attempts to get Arnald to come to obedience. He sent Thomas de Marchia and John Ministralis to the Hospitallers, and Thomas asked Arnald, by virtue of obedience, both as the vicar's nuncio and as prior of the convent, to return to the vicar's and his obedience, because if he did that, the vicar would show him mercy and they would be friends and in peace. Arnald replied that he would not go to the vicar, because as a papal nuncio he was exempt from Peter de Castro's jurisdiction and not obliged to obey due to a certain papal constitution that he had written down in a small book. He read the text to Thomas, who said that it began with "Extravagantem." According to one witness, it is doubtful that the booklet contained the entire constitution, but only the beginning, because Arnald later asked Bishop Gerard of Paphos for the full text. At any rate, Thomas reported back to the vicar, without Arnald. After various such warnings, Peter de Castro, it seems, promulgated sentences of excommunication against Arnald for his actions and his contempt [§§27, 32, 38, 63, 272].

Eventually, in the morning of the day after Christmas, 26 December 1329, i.e., St Stephen's day, Arnald de Fabricis went voluntarily to the convent of the Friars Preacher and entered the church while Mass was taking place. (The tailor, William Zamboni, said that Arnald came with the king and the master of the Hospitallers [§194], but this seems unlikely.) The king was present in the choir at the time, and Arnald entered the choir, greeted the king, knelt before him, and begged him to intercede on his behalf with the vicar and friars in order to obtain mercy and forgiveness for his actions against the Order. The king told Arnald: "Go to the obedience of your Order." Then the vicar, having spoken with the king briefly, asked John Ministralis to accompany Arnald de Fabricis to the sacristy and stay with him until the end of Mass. The vicar then sent the lay brothers Francis of Cyprus and John of Savoy to guard the nuncio in the sacristy, with John at the door. In the sacristy Arnald spoke at length with Simon de Vienna. After Mass the king summoned the vicar and the older friars of the convent and, in the presence of Arnald, he asked them for his own sake to show leniency, mercy, and justice to Arnald, saving the Order's correction and discipline. Then the king departed [§§27, 32, 38, 63, 82, 98, 118, 138, 158, 177, 194, 219, 251, 267].

If the convent had the usual layout, the sacristy would have been close to the choir, between the choir and the chapterhouse off the cloister. In answer to the king's pleas, the vicar and the older friars led Arnald de Fabricis to the chapterhouse, summoning the others with the customary bell. At first Arnald probably protested his exemption, saying, "You don't have power over me!" Eventually, however, Arnald "voluntarily" submitted, orally and in writing in his own hand, to the vicar and the Order, acknowledging that he had committed offenses contrary to the rules of the Order and asking for mercy, stating: "Whatever I did, I did of my own accord and not on behalf of the pope." The vicar absolved him from the sentences of excommunication that he had incurred for his faults and offenses [§§27, 32, 38, 98, 147, 245, 256, 272].

Peter de Castro then ordered that some constitutions of the Order be read in the presence of Arnald and the chapter, according to which, due to his faults and offenses, Arnald deserved imprisonment. Arnald was thus sentenced to imprisonment in the presence of the chapter, and the vicar asked the notary Mark of Parma to draw up a public document with the sentence against Arnald, who was condemned as a rebel, a fugitive, and a disobedient friar. On the advice of prudent friars and in reply to the prayers of the king, however, the vicar, out of reverence for the pope and the Apostolic See, did not carry out the sentence, but out of mercy he instead ordered that Arnald be placed in one of the most beautiful and spacious rooms of the entire convent, although it was strong and had been employed to incarcerate friars before, namely Peter Vitalis and James de Farges himself. The room had been built for the king, and the Dominican Archbishop John of Conti used to stay in the room when he visited. John of Savoy and Robert the Englishman escorted Arnald to his place of confinement [§§27, 32, 39, 63, 67, 82, 104, 117-118, 145, 196, 221, 235-236, 244-247].

The vicar said that Arnald should stay in the room until he ordered otherwise. The witnesses agreed that Arnald's confinement was only harsh in the sense that he could not leave without the vicar's and convent's permission, and to that extent the nuncio's work on behalf of the pope was impeded [§§116, 135]. Other prisoners were certainly treated more harshly by comparison, and Arnald was not put in irons or other devices. For Arnald things were generally comfortable: the room was nice and he had no restrictions on food or drink. Indeed, he ate and drank whatever he wanted, including fish, meat, eggs, hens, roosters, and good "Maroa wine." He was able to go to the infirmary when needed, but otherwise he could only stroll in the yard of the convent and in "the place of the friars" with permission and under guard. Thus he was sometimes seen in the infirmary and in the convent's garden [§§27, 40-41, 63, 82, 84, 88, 103, 105, 122, 143-144, 160, 181, 183].

While Arnald de Fabricis was incarcerated, Donnino of Parma and Baldo Spinola came to the convent on business for the king of Armenia and found that Arnald was being kept in a separate place. Baldo Spinola, procurator of the king of Armenia, asked Arnald about the execution of an affair that was entrusted to the nuncio by the Apostolic See. Arnald replied that he could not execute it because he could not leave the room in which he had been unjustly imprisoned.

The vicar, who was present, retorted that Arnald was not confined without reason and unjustly, but on account of his faults. At the episode Anselm de Silvano and possibly Thomas de Marchia were also present [§§232, 234].

For the first four or five days, friars such as Simon de Vienna and Arnald the porter could visit Arnald de Fabricis freely. One day, however, many seculars came wanting to enter the room to speak with Arnald. The vicar feared another scandal and ordered that the door be locked so no one would be allowed entry. When they left he ordered the room opened again, but a guard was placed at the door to prevent further interaction. The vicar then forbade Arnald from having conversations with anyone without his permission, and the residents of the convent were kept away. Thus when some pilgrims came for absolution – perhaps for visiting the Holy Land without license – Arnald could not speak to them [§§27, 63, 65, 85, 122, 160, 182, 201-202, 223, 267].

At this point the room was kept locked at night, but it was open during the daytime, although the door was guarded by lay brothers at all times. It seems that John of Savoy was first posted there, giving the key to Peter de Castro when the door was locked. Later Bertolino of Rieti replaced John of Savoy. The lay brother Alegrinus remarked that he took their place when they wanted to attend services. Peter de Castro allowed Arnald to have two friars of his choice who stayed with him day and night (perhaps not at the same time), namely Elias and Raymond Saraceni, the subprior at the time [§§27, 32, 39-40, 63, 82, 102, 117, 119, 141-142, 159, 162, 178-179, 219, 253, 267-268].

Eventually Hugh IV asked Peter de Castro to release Arnald to carry out papal business, and the king even had a public document drawn up with the details of his request. The vicar reported this to the chapter and left the decision to the maiores of the Order. After fifteen days or more in confinement,²⁰ out of reverence for the Apostolic See and due to the prayers of the king and prelates, Arnald was thus released. The vicar said to the nuncio: "I release you so you can execute the affairs that you have to do, but I do not remit your penance." Arnald replied: "Then I am still in prison" [§§27, 32, 41, 121, 145, 257].

²⁰ Most said "some days" very vaguely, but one witness said ten days [§103], which could be interpreted as the time after security was tightened. Bertolino of Rieti remarked that it seemed to him to be "usque ad unum mensem" [§164], but this is hard to understand.

The Inquisition

Arnald de Fabricis was released around the middle of January 1330. Pope John XXII had been informed of the events by 12 May 1330, for on that day he wrote to Peter of Palude, patriarch of Jerusalem, and Bishop Mark of Famagusta and Tortosa,²¹ ordering them to investigate Peter de Castro's alleged crimes and, if the accusations were true, to cite Peter de Castro to appear before the pope within four months of his citation. The pope's letter is included twice in the inquisition record [§§47-51, 283-287]. It is possible that Arnald de Fabricis himself or Peter de Manso had informed the pope, but the presence of factual errors in the papal letter might suggest that there was another source. Given the length of the journey from Avignon to Nicosia, the letter probably arrived sometime in late June or early July. Aside from a mission to Cairo in April, Palude seems to have been in Cyprus from January to September.²² Having received their instructions, the patriarch and bishop first went to the scene of the crime, so to speak, the Dominican convent [§280], and by the end of August they had decided to conduct an inquisition, first summoning Peter de Castro, who first appeared on 27 August. The inquisition was concluded on 25 October.

The first phase of the inquisition began at the Dominican convent with Patriarch Peter and Bishop Mark presiding, with the public notary by papal authority William Clavel, a cleric of Lyons, recording the proceedings [§2]. On the first day of the inquisition the defendant, Peter de Castro, appeared before the court and requested time to prepare exceptions to the accusations against him. The inquisitors, or judge-delegates, as they are called alternatively, granted him three days [§3]. Accordingly, on 30 August Peter de Castro reappeared in court. He asked the court to assign him a lawyer, specifically requesting Geoffrey Spancota (more often called Spanzota) of Milan. According to papal letters, by 1330 Spanzota was a canon of Famagusta and Nicosia and a master of canon and civil law, whose career in Cypriot ecclesiastical affairs spanned from 1325, when he received an expectant canonry in Famagusta, to at least 1353, when he was archdeacon of Famagusta and official of the Church of Nicosia.²³ The judges ordered Spanzota to represent the vicar on pain of excommunication and he obeyed, although not voluntarily [§4].

Using the letter of Pope John XXII, Palude and Bishop Mark drew up three articles. First, Peter de Castro was accused of (a) going in a hostile manner to the house that the two papal nuncios inhabited in Nicosia, (b) invading the house, in which the nuncios were keeping many goods of the Apostolic See, papal letters, and other writings concerning the pope's business, (c) much molestando the nuncios, and (d) much disturbing them in the execution of papal business [§24]. The second article was that the vicar had the Dominican nuncio Arnald de Fabricis captured and held in harsh imprisonment, against the constitution of the Apostolic See that warns that no one can exercise any jurisdiction over papal nuncios, not even an inquisitor of heresy [§26]. Third, Peter de Castro was charged with ignoring and holding in contempt the appeals that the former Dominican prior provincial James de Farges made to the pope against the vicar and with having him captured and held in harsh imprisonment [§28].

Then Peter de Castro proposed his exceptions to the charges as contained in John XXII's letter, denying every accusation against him, although he was vague about the charge of his imprisoning Arnald de Fabricis [§6]. Specifically, claiming that the pope had been misinformed, the vicar denied having entered accompanied with armed or unarmed men any house in Nicosia in which the nuncios – Arnald de Fabricis and Peter de Manso – were residing. He even argued that it would have been impossible to do such a thing in the town of Nicosia without being noticed and without causing a great scandal, because the city was the royal capital. It appears that the vicar's denial was based in part on a technicality: he pointed out that the nuncios were never residing at any house together [§7]!

Moreover, Peter de Castro denied that he had obstructed the nuncios in the execution of papal business or their own affairs, nor had he persecuted them with hatred. Avoiding the subject of Arnald's incarceration, the vicar explained that whatever he did do with respect to the nuncios was part of his duties as provincial vicar, because the nuncios committed violations against the Dominican Order, especially when they released James de Farges from prison. In this case he explained that he did it in order to defend the rights of the friars and the Order [§8]. Furthermore, he denied that he had incarcerated James de Farges after the latter had appealed to the pope, since he claimed that James had never made any appeal [§9]. Finally, the vicar accused the nuncios of violating the rights of the Order by having the chapterhouse bell rung to summon the friars, releasing a prisoner, and creating a schism among the friars of the convent. According to Peter de Castro, the nuncios committed these offenses in the name of the pope. The vicar suggested that the nuncios should be accused of these crimes [§10].

Having heard the vicar's exceptions, the judges ordered the nuncios to reply [§12]. Thus, on 31 August or 1 September Peter de Manso and Arnald de Fabricis appeared in court and declared that they had no intention in participating in the inquisition. [§13]. Then on 6 September the judge inquisitors gave a deadline of eight days to Friar James Gascon, Peter de Castro's procurator, to prove the vicar's exceptions [§14].

On 11 September, in a letter drawn up in the Dominican convent [§289], Peter of Palude delegated his role to a Franciscan, Bishop Matthew of Beirut, who no doubt was living in exile in Cyprus [§281].²⁴ The patriarch explained that the pope had recalled him to the West and the papal curia on important business, and so Bishop Matthew would act as subdelegate [§288]. This change caused some delay, and the second phase of the inquisition – the interrogations – only began on 26 September. By then Bishops Mark and Matthew had Francis de Salexedo (son of the late Artuxius de Salexedo of Vicenza), notary by imperial authority, replace William Clavel, who may have been one of Palude's notaries. Francis remained the scribe for the remainder of the inquisition, drawing up the document that has come down to us [§§1, 15].

On Wednesday, 26 September, probably meeting in Mark's house, Bishops Mark and Matthew appointed Balian de Gloria, subdeacon of Famagusta, as summoner, ordering him "to go to the place of the friars Preacher" and cite Peter de Castro to appear before them the following Monday evening [§§16-17]. Accordingly, on 1 October Balian informed the judges that he had gone and summoned the vicar, and that evening Peter de Castro did appear before the court. The inquisitors asked him to reappear in court on Wednesday to hear what they wanted to state and to proceed with the inquisition [§§18-19]. Ultimately Peter de Castro appeared before the judges four times in this phase. The second was on 3 October, when he was asked to reappear on Friday, because Matthew was absent and Mark was busy with other affairs [§20]. Therefore on the evening of 5 October he appeared for the third time before the court, "in the place of the Friars Preacher of Nicosia" [cf. §290]. The judges asked him whether he wanted to proceed to the inquisition and if he was ready to reply to the accusations against him, and Peter de Castro answered affirmatively. Then the papal letter and the articles of the inquisition were read to him. The vicar requested some time to reflect on his replies and the judges allowed him until the morning of the following day. They had him take an oath that he would speak the plain and pure truth [§21]. Peter de Castro appeared before the judges for the fourth time on 6 October, "in the chapterhouse of the Friars Preacher" [§22].

In his deposition, replying to the three articles per se, Peter de Castro again rejected every accusation against him [§§25, 27, 29]. He repeated the technicality that the nuncios were never living together in a house in Nicosia [§25]. Now forced to address his imprisoning Arnald de Fabricis, the vicar tried to justify his actions as well as he could. Peter de Castro claimed that he never knew about any papal constitution he violated by capturing Arnald and holding him in harsh imprisonment. In any case, the vicar maintained that the Dominican nuncio was not captured, but had willingly submitted and confessed his infractions against his Order. Moreover, the vicar asserted that Arnald was not so much imprisoned harshly as confined in a very nice room without many restrictions [§27].

The interrogations of fifteen other witnesses took place from 8 to 17 October [§§30-274]. Six of these witnesses were friars of the convent, i.e., Thomas de Marchia – no longer prior –, John Ministralis, Garcia de Bacharissa, James Gascon, Richard the Englishman, and Simon de Vienna, whether from Vienne or Vienna is unknown. Four lay brothers of the convent also testified: Francis of Cyprus, John of Savoy, Bertolino of Rieti, and Alegrinus. The other five witnesses were the convent's porter Arnald, the convent's tailor William Zamboni, Carnavabus – a Greek servant of the convent (Richard reads “Carnavalus”) –, the knight Donnino of Parma,²⁵ and the notary Mark of Parma, who was in the service of the archbishop of Nicosia.²⁶

Prior to his testimony, each witness took the oath that he would speak the plain and pure truth. Each responded concerning the three articles, although sometimes the witness was questioned many times on details. The Dominican friars were questioned in Latin, but the lay brothers, porter, tailor, and Greek servant had the articles “explained” to them, usually “in the vulgar” tongue [§§54, 152, 167, 187, 207, 249]. Interestingly, John of Savoy is called a lay brother (conversus) by the other witnesses [e.g., §31], but he is not described as such as a witness, nor are the articles explained to him in the vernacular [§109]. Perhaps his status had changed during the year. This would certainly be the case with Francis of Cyprus, known locally as Francis of Limassol, who became prior provincial in 1334.²⁷ Although it is not specified that the Greek Carnavabus had things explained to him in the “vulgar” tongue, he must have known French well: if we assume that the friars were speaking mainly French during the events of late 1329 and early 1330, this would explain why Carnavabus was able to provide so much direct discourse in his testimony [§§208, 211, 215].

For the most part, the testimonies only differ on small details attributable to different personal experiences and perspectives or to the loss of memory after so many months. Sometimes the tone that Peter de Castro or Arnald de Fabricis took is described in different ways. One witness, Richard the Englishman, may be the Robert who remained with Arnald de Fabricis in the chapterhouse during the initial confrontation. He might then be viewed as potentially hostile to the vicar, and in fact this is the case. Nevertheless, Richard does not contradict so much as supplement from Arnald’s perspective the testimony of the other witnesses [§§126-151].

²⁵ Donnino is famous for being the go-between for King Hugh IV of Cyprus and Giovanni Boccaccio. See Boccaccio, Genealogia deorum gentilium, Prohoemium and book IV, ch. 13.

²⁶ By early 1327 to at least early 1340, Mark, son of Rolandinus of Parma, was imperial notary and the public scribe of the archbishop: Cartulary, nos. 108b and 109a; Synodicum Nicosiense, no. L.VIIIc-d.

²⁷ The 1334 General Chapter replaced the previous prior provincial with Francis of Cyprus (Acta capitulorum generalium, ed. Reichert, vol. II, p. 227). He is the Francis of Limassol who was the Dominican prior provincial of the Holy Land in 1340, at which time he knew both Greek and Latin: Synodicum Nicosiense, no. L.14. At the 1343 General Chapter the prior provincial, perhaps Francis, was relieved of his duties (Acta capitulorum generalium, ed. Reichert, vol. II, p. 290).

Early on during the phase of the interrogations, on 9 October, Bishop Mark of Famagusta and Tortosa left his duties as judge delegate and inquisitor because he had to be away from Nicosia on some taxing business of his own, his church, and the Kingdom of Cyprus. He named as subdelegate James of Saint-Proper, canon of Nicosia, "experienced in both laws" [§§44-45, 52, 275]. James of Saint-Proper was canon of Nicosia at least from 1326, and by 1340 he was canon of Limassol and official of Nicosia, learned not only in law but also in the Greek language.²⁸ The letter of subdelegation was drawn up in Bishop Mark's house in Nicosia [§53]. Bishop Mark returned to Nicosia and took up his duties again on 24 October for the third and final phase of the inquisition [§275].

The inquisition ended on 25 October. That day the judges proceeded to the opening and publication of the testimonies. Peter de Castro first reserved the right to oppose the witnesses and their statements at the opportune time and place, asking Francis de Saledexo to draw up a public document to this effect [§276]. Having made public the testimonies, the judges asked the defendant if he wanted to place any objections to the witnesses or their testimonies. If so, the judges would give him a copy of the testimonies and assign him a deadline to propose his objections. Peter de Castro said that he intended to travel to the Apostolic See and appear before the pope as soon as possible in order to set things right, since – as he claimed – the pope had been misinformed. Therefore he did not wish to place his objections before the judges at present, but he repeated that he wanted to reserve his right to object to the witnesses and their testimonies at the time and place he wished [§278].

At that point the judges reviewed the proceedings [§§280, 290] and announced their decision. They found Peter de Castro guilty of two of the three accusations, although even these were much toned down: first, entering with armed men the room of the papal nuncio Arnald de Fabricis, while the other nuncio, Peter de Manso, was present; second, imprisoning the nuncio Arnald. Nothing was said about James de Farges' alleged appeal. Peter de Castro was summoned to appear at the papal curia within four months, and the judges told Francis de Saledexo to draw up a public document recording the citation and requested that those present act as attests [§291]. The vicar replied that he accepted the decision and that it was his intention to travel to the papal curia and appear before the pope as soon as possible. He also informed the judges that he intended to go to Famagusta and the other ports of Cyprus in order to find a ship to embark on his journey. Finally he asked the notary, Francis de Salexedo, to prepare for him a public instrument with his reply [§292].

The attests present that day included Dean Elias of Nicosia, Canon of Nicosia James of Saint Prosper, the lawyer Matthew de Pascalibus, the Franciscan provincial minister Frederick of Monte Vice, the Franciscan Friar John de Campania, and four Carmelites: the prior provincial and lector in theology Bernand Poncii, the prior of the Nicosia convent William Guarda, and Thomas Catelani and William Aimerici [§293].²⁹

The Aftermath

Peter de Castro was replaced as vicar at the 1330 Dominican General Chapter, probably because of the scandal.³⁰ Nevertheless, the inquisition does not seem to have settled the matter. Peter de Castro appears to have persuaded Pope John XXII that things had not been handled correctly in Nicosia. Thus on 1 December 1332 Pope John wrote to the bishop of Nice (? = Nitiensis), ordering him to investigate and inform the pope about the crimes allegedly committed by Peter de Castro against the papal nuncios Peter de Manso and Arnald de Fabricis [59059]. The letter has not been published, so we provide an edition (Reg. Aven. 44, ff. 652v-653r [A]; Reg. Vat. 105, f. 386v, no. MCCLXXXX [V]):

Venerabili fratri .. episcopo Nitiensi, salutem etc.

Ad audienciam nostram pervenit quod Petrus de Castro Ordinis Fratrum Predicatorum olim contra dilectos filios Petrum de Manso cantorem ecclesie Burgensis et Arnaldum de Fabricis eiusdem ordinis, tunc in partibus transmarinis Apostolice Sedis nuncios in regno Cipri existentes, multos excessus et alia quamplura enormia dinoscitur commisisse, ac nonnulla indecentia contra personam nostram – non absque magne temeritatis audacia – protullisse in nostram et Apostolice Sedis iniuriam et contemptum. Nos igitur, nolentes talia que liniam correctionis exposcunt – si veritate nitantur – conniventibus oculis [occulis V] pertransire, ac gerentes de tue circumspectionis industria

Non obstantibus felicis recordationis Bonifacii VIII, predecessoris nostri, quibus cavetur ne aliquis extra suam civitatem et diocesim nisi in certis exceptis casibus, et in illis ultra unam dietam a fine sue diocesis, ad iudicium evocetur, et de duabus dietis [A 653r] [editis *del. Interestingly enough, in this letter the pope no longer enumerates Peter de Castro's alleged crimes, but rather plays it safe in speaking vaguely of "multi excessus" and "alia quamplura enormia." It appears that the vicar's tactics were only partially successful, for clearly the pope was annoyed at the treatment of his nuncios in Cyprus and ordered another investigation. The case required the pope, the inquisitors, the king, and the vicar to balance their support for the Dominican Order's autonomy against papal prerogatives. The vicar decided in favor of his Order, which he himself represented; the pro-Dominican king had to be cautious; the inquisitors – at the end, one was still a Dominican – were rather lenient; and the pope, while he may have granted Peter de Castro a new hearing, seems to have wanted a stronger verdict. Yet if Peter de Castro managed to stretch the new procedure past John XXII's death in late 1334, he may have got off scot free. Unfortunately, we shall probably never know.

The Edition

Original documents actually produced in Cyprus, Frankish Greece, the Latin East, and even Byzantium are extremely rare in comparison with the West.³¹ The inquisition record mentions notaries frequently, at least five by name, and over fifteen separate documents play a role, including at least eight drawn up during the events. Yet only one remains, along with whatever is incorporated in it. Considering this, we have decided to publish the entire text, strictly following the orthography of the manuscript, adding punctuation, titles, and paragraph numbers for convenience. Notations are standard, and we supply words or letters in angle brackets <...>. We write out the abbreviation for Tortosa as "Antheradensis," but "Anteradensis" is an alternative.

In all, over fifty people were explicitly involved in the incidents and inquisition. Thus, an index of Dramatis personae, in alphabetical order, according to paragraphs, should be useful:

PETER DE CASTRO'S EXCEPTIONS: THURSDAY, 30 AUGUST

[5] Eodem die et instanti dictus vicarius obtulit et assignavit in iudicio coram dominis inquisitoribus supradictis exceptiones infrascriptas contra rescriptum. Quarum tenor dignoscitur esse talis:

PRELIMINARIES

[6] In Dei nomine, Amen. Hee sunt exceptiones quas coram vobis reverendis in Christo patribus et dominis dominis Petro, divina providentia patriarcha Ierosolimitano et administratore in spiritualibus et temporalibus Nimociensis ecclesie, et Marcho, eadem providentia Famagustano episcopo, iudicibus a Sede Apostolica deputatis ad informationem suscipiendam super quibusdam excessibus qui ad auditum apostolicum de me, fratre Petro de Castro, provinciali vicario Ordinis Predicatorum in provincia Terre Sancte, dicuntur pervenisse, videlicet cum armatis hominibus accessu hostiliter per me facto – ut asseritur – ad dormum in qua habitabant in civitate Nicosiensi domini Petrus de Manso, cantor Burgensis, et frater Arnaldus de Fabricis, sancte Sedis Apostolice nuntii in regno Cipri et partibus transmarinis, et ipsius domus in qua habitabant dicti domini nuntii et nonnulla bona sanctissimi in Christo patris et domini domini nostri Summi Pontificis et Romane Ecclesie, necnon litteras apostolicas et scripta publica et privata tangentia Sedis Apostolice negotia conservabant ac ipsorum dominorum nuntiorum invasione,³ et fratris Arnaldi de Fabricis, nuntii apostolici prefati, in carcere detentione⁴ et relaxationis de carcere coactione,⁵ necnon et fratris Jacobi de Fargis, olim Fratrum Ordinis Predicatorum provincie Terre Sancte provincialis prioris, spre[2r]tis – ut asseritur – et in contemptum deductis appellationibus per ipsum fratrem Jacobum ad sanctissimum in Christo patrem et dominum dominum nostrum Summum Pontificem interpositis, detentione et incarceratione,⁶ super quibus prefatis excessibus idem sanctissimus in Christo pater et dominus dominus noster Summus Pontifex per suarum seriem litterarum vobis reverendis patribus dominis delegatis prefatis et cuilibet vestrum in solidum dicitur commisisse, ut per vos vel alium seu alios super predictis et ea tangentibus informetis, et si premissa vel eorum aliqua repereritis veritate fulciri, quod me personaliter citetis etc., prout plenius et seriosius in ipsis litteris papalibus seu rescripto dicitur contineri, frater Petrus de Castro, prefatus Ordinis Predicatorum vicarius provincialis in provincia Terre Sancte, proponit,⁷ exhibet, assignat, et deponit in iudicio

⁶ detentione et incarceratione] detentionem et incarcerationem MS

ad defensionem suam super dicta commissione seu commissionibus vobis factis et omnibus aliis que ipsum tangant vel tangere possint in futurum, et informationem vestram, reverendorum patrum in Christo dominorum iudicum delegatorum premissorum, et omnem innocentiam super premissis et quolibet premissorum pro parte sua ostendendam. Et licet, reverendi patres, prout evidenter appareret ex tenore litterarum papalium et rescripti vobis reverendis patribus dominis iudicibus delegatis directorum, opponi posset et deberet per me, fratrem Petrum prefatum de Castro, Ordinis provincie Terre Sancte Fratrum Predicotorum vicarium provincialem prelibatum, tam nomine meo quam nomine tocius Ordinis Fratrum dicte provincie, contra et adversus rescriptum prefatum et litteras papales vobis super premissis et quolibet premissorum directas,⁸ quod nulla fides est dictis litteris seu rescripto adhibenda, quia manifestum continent in constructione peccatum, et est in eis vitium omissionis, dictionum, et orationis, ut apertissime appareret ex tenore ipsarum litterarum et rescripti, ibi cum dicitur: «In quem obsidente» etc. [§§49, 285], tamen, volens ad factum et veritatem facti devenire et innocentiam meam coram vobis reverendis patribus dominis delegatis prefatis super premissis vobis comisis apertissime et evidenter ostendere, solas exceptiones de expressione falsitatis et taciturnitate veritatis, seu de expressionibus falsitatum et taciturnitatibus veritatum et talibus que animum domini nostri Summi Pontificis moverunt ad ea scribenda, concedenda, et vobis committenda – que alias non scripsisset, concessisset, et commisisset, si expressiones falsitatum sanctitati sue suggeste non fuissent et factorum veritates tacite – que exceptiones sunt tales, duxi proponendas:

EXCEPTIONS

[7] In primis quidem dicit, et protestatur, et excipiendo proponit dictus frater Petrus, nomine suo et tocius Ordinis Fratrum Predicotorum provincie Terre Sancte, contra et adversus [2v] rescriptum et litteras papales quod emanarunt propter falsi suggestionem super pluribus evidentibus et manifestis falsis suggestionibus et talibus que animum domini nostri Summi Pontificis induxerunt ad ea scribenda, concedenda, et vobis reverendis patribus dominis delegatis prefatis committenda, que alias non scripsisset, concessisset, et commisisset, prout patet ex tenore ipsarum litterarum et rescripti vobis delegatis prefatis super premissis transmissorum, ibi primo cum dicitur: «Ad nostri apostolatus pervenit auditum quod Petrus de Castro, Ordinis Fratrum Predicotorum vicarius provincialis Terre Sancte, in sue salutis anime dispendium non formidans, cum nonnullis armatis hominibus domum quam inhabitabant in civitate Nicosiensi dilecti filii» etc. [§§49, 285], quia nequaquam verum est, nec unquam verum fuit, nec pro vero invenietur – salva reverentia cuiuscumque contrarium asserentis – quod idem frater Petrus, cum hominibus armatis vel sine armis, per aliquem modum malum seu ad aliquid malum suspectum accesserit ad aliquam domum civitatis Nicosiensis seu aliquam aliam in qua habitarent dicti dominus Petrus et frater Arnaldus, vel se intromiserit de aliquo facto cum eisdem nuntiis, nisi ad defensionem et tuitionem iuris sui et Ordinis Predicatorum civitatis Nicosiensis infra domum ipsorum fratrum. Et certe unum tale negotium non potuissest in civitate Nicosensi attemptari sine magno scandalo tocius civitatis et regni Cipri, quia est civitas regalis, et multorum scientia et continentia, sic quod occultum esse non posset, ymmo de necessitate quando commissum fuissest dictum negotium, quod absit, sicuti ad auditum domini nostri Summi Pontificis fuit deductum, vel aliter sic quod malo modo esset commissum, de necessitate sequeretur quod esset evidens, etiam manifestum, in ipsa civitate Nicosensi, et sic evidens et manifestum quod nulla posset tergiversatione celari. Et quod plus est, dicti dominus Petrus et frater Arnaldus, sicuti manifestum est, in civitate Nicosensi numquam simul in eodem hospitio habitaverunt. Unde, cum dictum rescriptum et littere papales emanaverint et processerint propter falsi suggestionem premissam, que talis est quod animum sanctissimi in Christo patris et domini domini nostri Summi Pontificis moverit ad id scribendum, concedendum, et committendum, seu ea scribenda, concedenda, et vobis reverendis patribus dominis delegatis prefatis committenda, que alias non scripsisset, concessisset, et commississet, satis aperte constat quod non valet dictum rescriptum et quod vigore ipsius non sit procedendum.

[8] Item, non recedendo ab exceptione prefata, sed ipsam semper affirmando, dicit et excipiendo proponit dictus frater Petrus, nomine quo supra, contra et adversus rescriptum et litteras papales, quod non procedunt nec vigore earum est procedendum, quia super expressissima falsi suggestione emanarunt et concessa fuerunt et tali que animum domini nostri Summi Pontificis movit ad id concedendum et scribendum, seu ea vobis reverendis patribus dominis iudicibus delegatis prefatis committenda, que alias non scripsisset, concessisset, et commississet, ut patet ex tenore ipsarum litterarum et rescripti, in eo quod fuit suggestum et significatum me dictos nuntios, «odii persequendo fomite,» multipliciter molestasse «et in executione negotiorum» domini nostri Summi Pontificis perturbasse etc. [§§49, 285], quia nequaquam [3r] verum fuit vel est – salvo honore cuiuscumque contrarium asserentis – quod dictos nuntios odii fomite persecutus fuerim, et in executione negotiorum domini nostri Summi Pontificis perturbaverim, et cum ipsis unquam aliquid facere habuerim, nisi ad defensionem iuris fratrum et Ordinis Predicatorum in domo ipsorum fratrum civitatis Nicosensis, ubi, propter honorem et tuitionem iuris Fratrum Predicatorum et privilegiorum suorum, ex debito officii tanquam vicarius provincialis Fratrum Ordinis Predicatorum provincie Terre Sancte coactus <sum> super pluribus violentiis per ipsum dominum Petrum et fratrem Arnaldum illatis, videlicet fractione carceris ipsius domus et extractione violenta unius carcerati, videlicet fratris Jacobi de Fargis, de quo fit mentio in rescripto, qui eius exigentibus demeritis secundum iusticiam regule Fratrum Predicotorum fuerat incarcерatus et per ipsos nuntios violenter extractus, et aliis pluribus enormibus violentiis fratribus ipsius domus per ipsos nuntios illatis, obsistere et vim vi cum moderamine inculpate tutele in ipsa domo nostra Fratrum Predicotorum replere. Unde secundum rei veritatem dicere non possunt nec potuerunt quod ego ipsos odii fomite persecutus fuerim et ipsos in executione negotiorum domini nostri Summi Pontificis perturbaverim, sed quod ipsi me et domum et Ordinem Fratrum Predicotorum, propter quam causam et alias premissas et infrascriptas sequitur – et est manifestum – quod rescriptum papale et littere super premissis directe non valent, nec vigore ipsarum est procedendum, ymmo tanquam rescriptum quod ad falsi suggestionem emanavit et plurium falsarum suggestionum est reprobandum et repellendum.

[9] Item, non recedendo ab exceptionibus prefatis, sed ipsas et earum quamlibet semper affirmando, dicit et excipiendo proponit dictus frater Petrus, nomine quo supra, contra rescriptum prefatum et litteras papales premissas, quod non valent, quia propter aliam expressam et manifestam falsi suggestionem emanarunt, ut constat ex ipso rescripto et tenore litterarum ibi cum dicitur: «Necnon prorumpendo in offensam ulterius dicte sedis, dilectum filium Jacobum de Fargis, olim Fratrum Ordinis provincie Terre Sancte eiusdem provincialem priorem, spretis et in contemptum deductis appellationibus quas idem Jacobus ab eodem vicario et contra ipsum ad sedem eandem interposuerat, capi fecit et duro carceri mancipari» etc. [§§49-285], quia – salva reverentia cuiuscumque qui contrarium asserere voluerit et premissa ad audientiam domini nostri Summi Pontificis deduxerit – non est verum quod dictum fratrem Jacobum, spretis et in contemptum deductis appellationibus per ipsum Jacobum interpositis, capi fecerim et duro carceri mancipari, ymmo ante appellationem aliquam per ipsum fratrem Jacobum interpositam fuerat et fuit dictus frater Jacobus – ut cum amaritudine cordis loquar – propter ita enormia delicta secundum iusticiam domus et religionis Fratrum Predicotorum incarcерatus. Et quia de carcere violenter fuerat extractus per dictos dominos Petrum de Manso et fratrem Arnaldum nuntios prefatos, vim vi repellendo cum moderamine semper inculpate tutelle, dicto fratre Jacobo numquam exeunte domum Predicotorum civitatis Nicosiensis, immo semper existente in domo ipsorum fratrum, nec unquam appellationem aliquam interponente, ad carcerem redactus fuit, nulla appellatione interposita per ipsum, quam si interposuit idem frater Jacobus, quod absit, numquam [3v] eidem fratri Petro notificata fuit. Unde dictum rescriptum et littere papales per falsi suggestionem emanarunt in eo quod dicitur et asseritur dictum fratrem Jacobum appellasse et post appellationem per ipsum interpositam, spreta et in contemptum deducta dicta appellatione, fuisse duro carceri mancipatum per me, fratrem Petrum, et per falsi suggestionem que movit animum domini nostri Summi Pontificis ad id scribendum, concedendum, et commitendum, seu ea, que alias non scripsisset, concessisset, et commisisset. Et sic non valet rescriptum predictum super premissis et quolibet premissorum directum et littere papales, nec vigore earum est procedendum, sed tanquam per falsi suggestionem impetrata sunt repellanda. Et hec breviter quo ad expressionem falsitatum manifestarum suggestarum propter que concessum fuit rescriptum et littere papales predice. Ex quibus apertissime demonstratur quod dicte littere papales et rescriptum sunt nullius efficacie et valoris et quod eorum vigore non est in aliquo procedendum.

[10] Item, non recedendo a dictis exceptionibus, sed ipsas et earum quamlibet semper affirmando, dicit et excipiendo proponit dictus frater Petrus, nomine quo supra, contra dictum rescriptum et litteras papales, quod non solum per falsissimas suggestiones prefatas manifestas et evidentes – ut supra premissum est – emanarunt, ymmo et propter tacitam veritatem et propter talem veritatis taciturnitatem seu veritatum que, si fuisset expressa seu fuissent expresse, dominus noster Summus Pontifex dictum rescriptum et litteras papales non concessisset, videlicet violationum privilegiorum Ordini Fratrum Predicatorum concessorum, ut pote fractionis carceris domus fratrum civitatis Nicosiensis, violentiarum fratribus dicte domus civitatis Nicosiensis in domo ipsorum fratrum evidenter et manifester per ipsos dominos Petrum de Manso et fratrem Arnaldum, nuntios prefatos, et consocios suos et complices factarum, cisme⁹ posite inter fratres dicte domus per ipsum fratrem Arnaldum in pulsando et pulsari faciendo ad capitulum et fratres similiter congregari faciendo ad instantiam suam, asserendo quod ad hoc posse habebat, cum nullum super hoc haberet, licet posse – ut premissum est – se habere assereret ex potestate sibi per dominum nostrum Summum Pontificem viva voce commissa, de qua commissione licet ab eo petitum pluries fuerit ut fidem faceret, numquam fidem fecit. Que omnia et singula et multa alia oltragia suo loco et tempore specificanda si expressissent et ad noticiam domini nostri Summi Pontificis deduxissent dicti domini nuntii, dictum rescriptum et littere papales non emanassent seu processissent. Et sic constat quod non valent, nec vigore eorum est procedendum, sed sunt nullius valoris, tanquam rescriptum et littere papales emanantia et procedentia multis veritatibus tacitis et falsitatibus suggestis et talibus que animum domini nostri Summi Pontificis moverint et verisimiliter movere debuerint ad id scribendum vobis reverendis patribus dominis iudicibus delegatis prefatis, concedendum et committendum super premissis et ea tangentibus, que alias non scripsisset et commisisset idem dominus noster Summus Pontifex.

[11] Quas omnes et singulas exceptiones alternative et coniunctim et divisim dicit et excipiendo [4r] proponit nomine quo supra dictus frater Petrus, protestans quod non astringit se ad probandum nisi quod sufficiat ad intentionem suam relevandam, et quod in omni actu per vos, reverendos patres dominos delegatos prefatos, facto et fiendo de cetero qui ipsum tangat vel tangere possit in futurum, admitti debeat ad legitimam defensionem ut

OTHER SUMMONS AND APPEARANCES

SUMMONS OF PETER DE MANSO AND ARNALD DE FABRICIS: THURSDAY, 30 AUGUST

[12] Eodem die et instanti dicti domini inquisitores statuerunt ac etiam prefixerunt terminum predictis dominis Petro et fratri Arnaldo, nuntiis Apostolice Sedis, ad diem Jovis proxime sequentem ad replicandum contra exceptiones propositas per dominum vicarium antedictum.

APPEARANCE OF PETER DE MANSO AND ARNALD DE FABRICIS: 1 SEPTEMBER¹⁰

[13] Prima die Septembbris comparuerunt venerabiles viri domini Petrus de Manso, cantor Burgensis, et Arnaldus de Fabricis, Ordinis Predicatorum, nuntii Apostolice Sedis, coram dominis inquisitoribus antedictis, et dixerunt quod ipsi non intendebant se facere partem in negotio inquisitionis nec promotores esse vel prosecutores inquisitionis predicte, sed rogabant ipsos dominos inquisitores quod mandatum apostolicum adimplerent. Et dicti domini inquisitores dixerunt ipsis dominis nuntiis quod volebant deliberare et deberent, si placeret eis, venire die Jovis ad audiendum responsionem ipsorum. Qui responderunt quod intentionis ipsorum pro dicto negotio coram ipsis ulterius comparere.¹¹

SUMMONS OF JAMES GASCON, DEFENDANT'S PROCURATOR: WEDNESDAY, 6 SEPTEMBER¹²

[14] Die Mercurii sexta mensis Septembbris dicti domini inquisitores statuerunt et prefixerunt terminum fratri Jacobo Vasconi, procuratori dicti vicarii, octo dierum pro prima dilatatione ad probandum exceptiones per ipsum dominum vicarium in iuditio assignatas.

¹⁰ It is probable that this occurred on Friday, 31 August, as required in §12, and that the scribe, William Clavel, erred in thinking that August had 30 days. Thus in §14 below he mistakenly claims that 6 September is Wednesday, when it fell on Thursday. In §16 the new scribe, Francis de Salexedo, has the day and date correct.

¹¹ The sentence lacks a verb and the genitive "intentionis" does not appear to make sense.

¹² Wednesday fell on 5 September, which is probably correct. See note 10.

ARTICLES OF THE INQUISITION AND PETER DE CASTRO'S RESPONSES

PROLOGUE

[23] In Dei nomine, Amen. Hec est inquisitio quam faciunt et facere intendant ad instructionem et informationem suam reverendi in Christo patres frater Marcus, permissione divina ecclesiarum Famagustane et Antheradensis episcopus, iudex seu inquisitor a Sede Apostolica deputatus ad infrascripta una cum reverendo in Christo patre et domino domino fratre Petro, divina providentia patriarcha Ierosolimitano, et frater Matheus, episcopus Beritensis, ab eodem domino patriarcha iudex subdelegatus seu subinquisitor deputatus, contra venerabilem virum fratrem Petrum de Castro, Ordinis Fratrum Predicatorum vicarium in provincia Terre Sancte, volentes mandatis domini nostri Pape et sancte Sedis Apostolice firmiter obedire et formam ipsorum mandatorum, prout et sicut eisdem iniunctum existit, fideliter adimplere, super excessibus infrascriptis quos dictum fratrem Petrum vicarium commisisse ad auditum domini nostri Pape pervenit, sicut in ipsis litteris continetur, ut, dicta informatione recepta, possint procedere ad executionem mandati apostolici secundum formam ipsius.

ARTICLE ONE

[24] In primis quod dictus frater Petrus de Castro, vicarius Ordinis Fratrum Predicotorum in provincia Terre Sancte, cum aliquibus armatis hominibus, ad domum quam inhabitabant in civitate Nicosiensi venerabiles viri dominus Petrus de Manso, cantor ecclesie Burgensis, et frater Arnaldus de Fabricis, Ordinis Fratrum Predicotorum, nuntii Apostolice Sedis, hostiliter accessit, dictamque domum, in qua prelibati nuntii nonnulla bona dicte sedis et litteras apostolicas et alia scripta quam plurima tangentia negotia domini nostri Summi Pontificis conservabant, invasit, nuntios ipsos multipliciter molestando eosque in executione negotiorum apostolicorum plurimum perturbando.

PETER DE CASTRO'S RESPONSE TO ARTICLE ONE

[25] Interrogatus dictus frater Petrus de Castro, vicarius antedictus, per dictos iudices super dicto primo articulo inquisitionis predicte, qui incipit: «In primis» etc., dixit suo sacramento quod numquam scivit nec audivit dici quod dicti domini Petrus de Manso et frater Arnaldus simul habitarent in una domo in civitate [5v] Nicosiensi, nec unquam cum hominibus armatis accessit ad domum quam simul inhabitarent predicti dominus Petrus et frater Arnaldus in civitate predicta. Verum est quod quidam frater Ordinis sui et conventus Nicosiensis nomine frater Jacobus de Fargis, qui, propter culpas multas quas commiserat, de consilio discretorum Ordinis fuerat sententialiter et carceri deputatus, per violentiam fuit extractus de dicto carcere per fratrem Arnaldum de Fabricis dicti Ordinis, contra voluntatem ipsius vicarii et fratrum, reclamante subpriore dicti conventus, et reductus

ad quandam cameram infra septa domus dicti conventus que concessa erat per fratres predictos ipsi fratri Arnaldo ad inhabitandum. In qua camera ipsum tenebat et defensabat, contra voluntatem dicti vicarii et fratrum conventus et contra privilegia et constitutiones Ordinis predicti. Ad quam cameram dictus vicarius misit priorem et antiquiores fratres dicti conventus ad requirendum dictum fratrem Jacobum a dicto fratre Arnaldo, et finaliter ipsem vicarius cum aliquibus ex dictis fratribus accessit. Et inventa porta dicte camere clausa et firmata, requisivit rogando, monendo, et precipiendo ipsi fratri Arnaldo quod dictum fratrem Jacobum eidem vicario restitueret. Cui frater Arnaldus, spretis rogaminibus dictorum fratrum ac precaminibus, monitionibus, et preceptis ipsius vicarii, eundem fratrem Jacobum restituere recusavit, asserens se non esse subiectum Ordini nec teneri sibi in aliquo obedire. Quibus ita peractis, dictus vicarius, videns tantam iniuriam et fractionem privilegiorum et constitutionum dicti Ordinis inferri sibi et dicto Ordini, et quod non poterat inducere exhortationibus, monitionibus, et preceptis dictum fratrem Arnaldum ad restituendum sibi dictum fratrem Jacobum, de consilio discretorum pensavit adhibere in continentia remedium ut fratrem Jacobum predictum rehahere posset et ipsum reducere in pristinum statum in quo fuerat pro correctione eius, exigentibus culpis et demeritis, mancipatus. Et considerans quod predicta per se non poterat adimplere, ad coadiuvandum et substinendum officium suum imploravit auxilium brachii secularis, a quo habuit aliquos seculares cum quibus ivit ad portam camere predicte in qua dictus frater Jacobus defensabatur, ut dictum est, non hostiliter nec animo iniuriandi nuntiis apostolicis qui in eadem camera erant, sed – semper salvata eorum reverentia – acceperunt dictum fratrem Jacobum, qui sponte, sine aliqua manus impositione clerici vel secularis, ivit ad dictum vicarium, et ipsum reduxerunt ad locum unde fuerat extractus. Et predicta facta fuerunt cum maiori moderamine quo fieri potuerunt et sine aliqua iniuria et lesione dictorum nuntiorum et bonorum et rerum que in dicta camera erant. Et in crastinum dictus frater Arnaldus, videns et considerans quod non bene fecerat et quod tot et tanta perpetraverat contra Ordinem suum et privilegia et consti~~t~~u^tiones ipsius Ordinis, recessit de predicta camera solus et sine socio, et reduxit se ad domum Hospitalis in civitate Nicosiensi cum omnibus rebus et bonis que in dicta camera conservabat.

ARTICLE TWO

[26] Item, quod postmodum dictus frater Petrus de Castro, vicarius prelibatus, [6r] dictum fratrem Arnaldum de Fabricis Ordinis Predicatorum, Apostolice Sedis nuntium, capi fecit et duro carceri mancipari, contra constitutionem Apostolice Sedis qua cavetur, in summa, ut nullus in nuntios Apostolice Sedis ullam sibi vendicare debeat iurisdictionem quoquomodo, etiam si sit inquisitor heretice pravitatis.¹⁴

¹⁴ Extravag. Commun. 5.3.3.

PETER DE CASTRO'S RESPONSE TO ARTICLE TWO

[27] Interrogatus frater Petrus, vicarius prelibatus, per dictos iudices super dicto secundo articulo, qui incipit: «Item, quod postmodum» etc., dixit suo sacramento quod predictum fratrem Arnaldum non fecit capi nec duro carceri mancipari, sed post plures dies, videlicet in crastinum Nativitatis Domini, dictus frater Arnaldus, post multas monitiones et mandata et preceptorum transgresiones et contumacias et sententias excommunicationis in eum latas propter contemptus et contumacias antedictas, gratis et spontanea voluntate venit ad locum Fratrum Predicatorum et intravit ecclesiam dum missarum solemnia agerentur, existente ibidem domino rege. Et prostraxit¹⁵ se coram dicto domino rege, postulans ab eodem ut dignaretur intercedere apud vicarium et fratres pro misericordia obtainenda de commissis per eum in offensam Ordinis et religionis. Qui dictus dominus rex, finitis missarum solemnibus, convocavit ad se dictum vicarium et fratres antiquiores domus, presente dicto fratre Arnaldo, et rogavit eos ut amore sui mitius agerent cum eodem, salva Ordinis correctione et disciplina. Dictusque vicarius et fratres, ob reverentiam Sedis Apostolice et etiam volentes precaminibus domini regis complacere, duxerunt dictum fratrem Arnaldum ad capitulum domus predicte, in quo capitulo spontanee vivo vocis oraculo et scripto manu propria facto recognovit se perpetrasse predicta omnia et alia que commiserat contra Ordinem et Ordinis instituta, postulans misericordiam de commissis per ipsum. Hiis peractis, dictus vicarius, de consilio discretorum, ad scandalum removendum deputavit sibi cameram unam pulchriorem et latiorem tocius domus, in qua stetit aliquibus diebus cum fratribus sociis et servitoribus quos elegit, sine restrictione cibi vel potus, nulla penitentia sibi iniuncta, sed tantum sibi mandato quod de camera illa non recederet absque voluntate et licentia dicti vicarii et conventus. Verum, quadam die, supervenientibus secularibus multis volentibus introire ad ipsum, timens dictus vicarius ne materia alicuius scandali oriretur, mandavit eis claudi portam dicte camere ne possent ingredi. Quibus recedentibus, confestim iussit cameram aperiri. Postmodum, elapsis aliquibus diebus, ob reverentiam Sedis Apostolice et ad preces domini regis et aliorum prelatorum, fuit totaliter et absolute relaxatus ad exequendum negotia domini nostri Summi Pontificis et Apostolice Sedis, salva correctione domini nostri Summi Pontificis et Ordinis sui predicti. Et quantum est de eo quod in dicto articulo et littera apostolica continetur, quod contra constitutionem dicte sedis ipse vicarius dictum fratrem Arnaldum capi fecerat et duro carceri mancipari, dicit idem vicarius quod numquam ad noti[6v]ciam seu scientiam ipsius pervenit quod dicta constitutio emanasset, licet fratrem Arnaldum predictum non fecerit capi nec duro carceri mancipari, ut superius est relatum.

ARTICLE THREE

[28] Item, quod dictus frater Petrus vicarius, spretis et in contemptum deductis appellationibus quibusdam ad Sedem Apostolicam interpositis per fratrem Jacobum de Fargis, olim priorem provincialem Ordinis antedicti, ab ipso vicario et contra eundem, capi etiam fecit et duro carceri mancipari ipsum fratrem Jacobum, in dicte sedis offensam.

PETER DE CASTRO'S RESPONSE TO ARTICLE THREE

[29] Interrogatus dictus vicarius per iudices antedictos super dicto tercio articulo inquisitionis predicte qui incipit: «Item, quod dictus frater Petrus vicarius, spretis» etc., suo sacramento respondit et dixit quod dictum fratrem Jacobum ob eius culpas, de consilio discretorum, ad correctionem Ordinis exercendam carceri mancipari fecit, prout superius dictum est. Sed numquam audivit nec scivit quod ipse frater Jacobus ab ipso vicario et contra ipsum appellaverit ad dominum nostrum Summum Pontificem et Sedem Apostolicam ante incarcerationem predictam, nec etiam in ipsa incarceratione, quoniam ipse absens erat a loco. Nec postea eidem notificatum fuit. Nec dictam incarcerationem fieri fecit in offensam dicte Sedis Apostolice, ad quam non extiterat appellatum, ut dictum est, sed ad correctionem Ordinis exequandam, ut superius continetur.

RESPONSES OF OTHER WITNESSES

THOMAS DE MARCHIA: MONDAY, 8 OCTOBER

[30] Die Lune octavo mensis Octobris comparuit coram supradictis iudicibus frater Thomas de Marchia, Ordinis Fratrum Predicorum, vocatus in testem. Et delato sibi sacramento, iuravit ad sancta Dei evangelia super toto negotio dicte inquisitionis et articulis eiusdem inquisitionis sibi lectis ac etiam super aliis predictis annexis et dependentibus ab eisdem, quibus eum dicti iudices interrogaverint, meram et puram dicere veritatem, remotis precio, precibus, timore, odio, et amore.

[31] Interrogatus dictus frater Thomas, testis iuratus in dicta causa, super primo articulo dicte inquisitionis, qui incipit: «In primis quod dictus frater Petrus de Castro» etc., respondit suo sacramento se tantum inde scire, videlicet quod quadam die de mense Decembris dominus Petrus de Manso, cantor ecclesie Burgensis, et frater Arnaldus de Fabricis, Ordinis Fratrum Predicorum, Apostolice Sedis nuntii, accesserunt ad capitulum Fratrum Predicorum de Nicosia et fecerunt pulsari campanam per quam convocantur fratres ad capitulum. Et convenientibus fratribus in unum in capitulo, ambo dicti nuntii mandaverunt fratri Petro, vicario predicto, et dicto testi, tunc existenti priore dicti conventus, quod fratrem Jacobum de Fargis dicti Ordinis, incarceratedum per ipsum vicarium pro suis excessibus, deberent educere de carcere et ipsum representare coram eis, quia volebant inquirere ab eo super aliquibus. Qui responderunt quod non tenebantur eis prima facie obedire, cum essent immediate subiecti Sedi Apostolice et exempti, nisi ipsi ostenderent aliquid privilegium apostolicum ex quo appareret eos habere auctoritatem et potestatem precipiendi eis predicta, et eo ostenso, parati erant statim obedire. Dicti nuntii dixerunt [7r] quod tenebantur eis obedire, et fecerunt legi quoddam scriptum ubi mandabatur eis in virtute obedientie et sub pena excommunicationis quod deberent ipsum fratrem Jacobum relaxare. De quo scripto peciit dictus vicarius copiam a dictis nuntiis, et pluries rogavit ipsum notarium ut daret eis in publicam formam. Et noluerunt eis dare. Demum, excitatis rumoribus inter eos, vicarius mandavit omnibus fratribus in capitulo ibi existentibus quod deberent sequi ipsum vicarium ad ecclesiam. Et ipsi preceperunt eis ne sequerentur eum. Et quantum poterant, prohibebant. Et una pars fratrum secuta fuit ipsum vicarium et alia remansit cum dictis nuntiis. Quorum remanentium in dicto capitulo nomina sunt hec, scilicet fratres Robertus Anglicus, Gaufredus Pitaviensis, Petrus de Aragonia, Petrus de Montegrosso, Robertus de Sancto Dionisio, et aliqui alii de quibus ad presens non recordatur. Et hoc fuit de mane ante prandium. Postmodum quidam conversus, frater Johannes de Sabaudia, requisitus fuit per dictos nuntios ut daret eis clavim dicti carceris. Et cum dare non vellet, dictus frater Arnaldus eam sibi abstulit per violentiam, prout dictus frater Johannes sibi dixit, nam dictus testis non erat presens quando ablata fuit clavis. Sed ipse testis, qui tunc erat prior, interrogavit eum quare dedisset ei clavim, et ipse respondit tanquam priori suo quod sibi ablata fuerat violenter. Tunc dicti nuntii accesserunt ad carcerem et extraxerunt dictum fratrem Jacobum, invito vicario atque priore. Et duxerunt eum ad infirmatorium et dederunt ei comedere carnes ibi, sine licentia vicarii et prioris. Dictusque vicarius una cum priore et aliis fratribus accesserunt ad dominum regem et exposuerunt ei violentiam factam Ordini per nuntios antedictos. Et ostenderunt ei privilegium per quod possunt petere auxilium brachii secularis casu exigente. Et pecierunt ab eo auxilium brachii ipsius contra violentiam antedictam. Et dictus dominus rex, volens servare privilegia eis indulta a Sede Apostolica, ob reverentiam ipsius sedis concessit eis auxilium brachii secularis. Postmodum dictus prior accessit ad cameram ubi erant nuntii prelibati cum fratre Jacobo, quem tenebant ibidem, et benigne rogavit dictos nuntios ut eidem restituerent fratrem Jacobum predictum. Qui nuntii responderunt quod nolebant ei restituere. Iterum, alia vice dictus prior accessit ad cameram cum aliis quampluribus fratribus et monuit et rogavit eos ut deberent eis restituere dictum fratrem Jacobum. Qui nullo modo voluerunt. Postea vicarius personaliter accessit ad dictam cameram et monuit et rogavit eos ut ei restituerent fratrem Jacobum. Qui responderunt quod non erat suus superior, nec tenebantur sibi in aliquo obedire, nec restituerent ullo modo. Videntes finaliter quod non potuerant ipsum pacifice rehabere, fecerunt hostium aperiri, et introduxerunt sargentes armatos, et ceperunt predictum fratrem Jacobum, et reduxerunt eum ad carcerem, sine lesione et dampno bonorum et rerum et scripturarum existentium in camera nuntiorum predictorum.

[32] Interrogatus dictus testis super secundo articulo dicte inquisitionis, qui incipit: «Item, quod post[7v]modum dictus frater Petrus de Castro, vicarius prelibatus» etc., respondit suo sacramento quod veritas negotii non fuit sicut in articulo continetur, sed sic se habuit, videlicet quod dictus frater Arnaldus, post excessus quos commiserat contra Ordinem et vicarium prefatos, in crastinum exivit dictam cameram et se reduxit ad domum Hospitalis Sancti Johannis in Nicosia, et fecit portari de dicta domo fratrum res et bona omnia que habebat in domo et camera predicta. Et post aliquos dies dictus frater Thomas, et frater Johannes ministralis¹⁶ cum eo, ivit ad dictum fratrem Arnaldum existentem in dicta domo Fratrum Hospitalis. Et eidem dixit et precepit, in virtute obedientie tanquam nuntius vicarii et prior dicti conventus, et ex parte vicarii predicti, quod deberet venire ad dictum vicarium et eius obedientiam, quia si hoc faceret, vicarius faceret sibi misericordiam ita quod contentaretur et essent amici et in pace. Et dictus frater Arnaldus respondit ei quod non iret ad dictum vicarium, quia erat exemptus a iurisdictione ipsius et non tenebatur eidem obedire propter quandam constitutionem papalem, ut asserebat, quam habebat scriptam in quodam libello. Quam constitutionem ipse legit dicto testi et dicebat eam esse "Extravagantem."¹⁷ Et ita reversus fuit dictus testis ad vicarium sine dicto fratre Arnaldo, et retulit sibi omnia ea que fecerat et dixerat cum predicto fratre Arnaldo. Deinde, in die Sancti Stephani in mane, dictus frater Arnaldus venit sponte et sine aliqua violentia ad locum Fratrum Predicatorum in Nicosia. Et supplicavit domino regi existenti in choro ecclesie dum missarum solemnia celebrarentur ut dignaretur intercedere pro ipso penes vicarium et fratres predictos pro misericordia obtainenda ab eis pro ipso. Et dictus dominus rex, finita missa, locutus fuit vicario predicto, et rogavit eum quod faceret misericordiam fratri Arnaldo prefato, salva tamen Ordinis iusticia. Post hec, vicarius et fratres et frater Arnaldus cum eis iverunt ad capitulum, ubi frater Arnaldus dixit se venisse ad obedientiam ipsius vicarii et Ordinis. Et cognovit se commisisse et deliquisse contra ipsum vicarium et Ordinem suum, petens misericordiam ab eo. Et dictus vicarius ipsum absolvit tunc a sententia excommunicationis, prout sibi videtur, quam incurrerat propter eius culpas et excessus. Et fecit legi in audiencia ipsius fratris Arnaldi et capitulo quasdam constitutiones Ordinis prelibati, ex vigore quarum, propter excessus et culpas commissas per eundem fratrem Arnaldum, ipse meruerat carceri mancipari. Et ipsum fratrem Arnaldum carceri condempnavit in presentia dicti capituli. Tamen idem vicarius, ob reverentiam domini nostri Summi Pontificis et Sedis Apostolice, non fecit ipsum mancipari deputato carceri, sed fecit sibi assignari quandam cameram de pulchrioribus que sint in dicta domo fratrum. Et precepit ei quod deberet esse in dicta camera usque ad mandatum suum. Et concessit ei duos fratres qui essent in societate ipsius die et nocte. Et post aliquos dies, ad preces dicti domini regis, vicarius prefatus relaxavit ipsum fratrem Arnaldum totaliter a dicta camera et precepto suo, prout audivit dictus testis, quia non erat tunc presens quando fuit relaxatus.

[33] Interrogatus si camera predicta in qua [8r] positus fuit frater Arnaldus predictus clausa fuit cum clavi et mansit continue clausa, respondit quod bene fuit clausa, sed non mansit continue clausa, ymmo aliquando manebat aperta et aliquando clausa.

[34] Interrogatus dictus testis super tercio articulo, qui sic incipit: «Item, quod dictus frater Petrus vicarius, spretis» etc., dixit suo sacramento quod nunquam audivit nec scivit dictum fratrem Jacobum appellasse nec voce nec scripto.

JOHN THE MINISTRALIS: MONDAY, 8 OCTOBER

[35] Eadem die Lune VIII mensis Octobris frater Johannes ministralis, Ordinis Fratrum Predicotorum, vocatus in testem in dicta causa, comparuit coram iudicibus supradictis. Et iuravit ad sancta Dei evangelia super toto negotio dicte inquisitionis et articulis ipsius inquisitionis sibi lectis ac etiam aliis predictis anexis et dependentibus ab eisdem, quibus eum dicti iudices interrogaverint, meram et puram dicere veritatem, remotis precio, precibus, timore, odio, et amore.

[36] Interrogatus dictus frater Johannes, testis iuratus in dicta causa, super primo articulo dicte inquisitionis, qui incipit: «In primis quod dictus frater Petrus» etc., respondit suo sacramento quod dicti nuntii non habitabant simul in una domo in Nicosia, ut videtur in articulo contineri, sed frater Arnaldus hospitabatur in quadam camera infra septa domus Fratrum Predicotorum, et dominus Petrus de Manso morabatur per se in civitate Nicosiensi. Sed negotium sic se habuit quod quadam die accesserunt dicti nuntii ad locum predictum, et fecerunt pulsari campanam qua convocantur fratres ad capitulum. Et convenientibus fratribus in unum, dicti nuntii pecierunt a vicario quod deberet educere de carcere fratrem Jacobum de Fargis, quia volebant inquirere de aliquibus factis cum ipso. Responsum fuit eis quod non tenebantur eum educere ad mandatum ipsorum, si non ostenderent aliquod¹⁸ mandatum a Sede Apostolica per quod tenerentur obedire mandatis ipsorum. Tunc vicarius surrexit de capitulo et mandavit fratribus in virtute sancte obedientie quod deberent sequi ipsum vicarium, et dictus frater Arnaldus e contrario precepit quod non recederent. Aliqui fratres secuti sunt vicarium, et aliqui remanserunt cum fratre Arnaldo, de quorum remanentium nominibus non recordatur. Tunc frater Arnaldus et dominus Petrus surrexerunt et invenerunt fratrem Johannem de Sabaudia, qui custodiebat clavem carceris, et petierunt ab eo clavim. Et ipse noluit eis dare. Et frater Arnaldus per violen~~tiam~~ abstulit illi, ut audivit dictus testis a dicto fratre Johanne de Sabaudia. Et aperuit carcerem, et extraxit fratrem Jacobum, et duxit eum ad infirmatorium. Postmodum [8v] in nocte moratus fuit idem frater Jacobus in camera dicti fratris Arnaldi. Et vicarius misit priorem conventus, videlicet fratrem Thomam de Marchia, tunc priorem, ad cameram dicti fratris Arnaldi, existente ibidem domino Petro de Manso, consocio suo. Qui prior rogavit et monuit eos ut deberent ei restituere fratrem Jacobum predictum. Qui noluerunt ei restituere. Tunc habuerunt consilium dicti vicarius et fratres quomodo possent repellere violentiam dicto Ordini et eis illatam, et habito consilio accessit dictus vicarius ad regem et postulavit ab eo auxilium brachii secularis. Et dominus rex, certificatus de privilegiis Ordinis, iussit eis dari auxilium. Iterum, dictus vicarius reversus ad domum rogavit et monuit eos quod sibi redderent fratrem Jacobum, et ipsi noluerunt restituere. Finaliter clientes qui erant cum dicto vicario fregerunt et aperuerunt hostium dicte camere, et ceperunt fratrem Jacobum, et reduxerunt eum ad carcerem, salvis – ut credit – omnibus rebus et bonis que dicti nuntii habebant in camera predicta.

[37] Interrogatus si hostiliter vel causa offendendi dictos nuntios vel dampnum inferendi rebus eorum vel molestandi aut turbandi eos in executione negotiorum apostolicorum accessit ipse vicarius ad cameram dicti fratris Arnaldi, respondit quod non, sed solum causa recuperandi dictum fratrem Jacobum et exercendi Ordinis disciplinam.

[38] Interrogatus dictus testis super secundo articulo predicte inquisitionis, qui sic <incipit>: «Item, quod postmodum» etc., respondit suo sacramento se tantum recordari, videlicet quod postquam dictus frater Jacobus fuit reductus ad carcerem, ut supra in proximo articulo continetur, dictus frater Arnaldus recessit de camera et domo dictorum fratrum et ivit ad domum Hospitalis Sancti Johannis Ierosolimitani, que est Nicosie. Et fecit illuc portari omnes res et bona que habebat in camera dictorum fratrum, et stetit per aliquod tempus in domo dicti Hospitalis. Et quodam die ipse testis ivit cum fratre Thoma de Marchia, tunc priore dicti conventus Nicosiensis, ad domum dicti Hospitalis ut ipse prior ex parte vicarii preciperet dicto fratri Arnaldo quod redire deberet ad mandatum ipsius vicarii et obedientiam Ordinis. Si dictus prior locutus fuerit dicto fratri Arnaldo, non bene recordatur. Sed videtur sibi quod per quandam nuntium responsum fuerit dicto priori ex parte fratris Arnaldi quod ipse frater Arnaldus nolebat nec tenebatur ire ad mandatum dicti vicarii nec obedientiam Ordinis, pro eo quod erat nuntius domini Pape. Et procedente tempore, in festo Beati Stephani in mane, existente domino rege in choro ad missam, vidi dictum fratrem Arnaldum intrare chorum et ponere se flexis genibus coram dicto domino rege. Sed quid locutus fuerit ei et quid dominus rex responderit sibi, nescit. Sibi tamen videtur quod dominus rex dixerit ei: «Eatis ad obedientiam Ordinis vestri.» Et interim vicarius dixit dicto testi quod deberet ire cum dicto fratre Arnaldo ad sacristiam et ipsum associare ibi, et ita fecit usque quod missa finita fuit. Et ipsa finita, vicarius et alii fratres iverunt ad capitulum, et ibi dictus frater Arnaldus recognovit culpas et excessus suos et peciit misericordiam a vicario. Quid fecerit vicarius cum eo non recordatur.

[39] Interrogatus si ipse tulit sententiam carceris in scriptis contra dictum fratrem Arnaldum tunc in dicto capitulo, respondit: videtur sibi quod sic tulerit, tamen non bene recordatur. Scit tamen quod vicarius non fuit exe[9r]cutus sententiam carceris, si tulit, quia non incarcерavit ipsum fratrem Arnaldum in carcere conventus, sed ipsum posuit in quadam pulchra camera et eidem deputavit duos socios fratres ad associandum eum.

[40] Interrogatus si dicta camera fuit clausa et clausa manebat continue, respondit quod aliquando clausa et aliquando aperta manebat, et quandoque poterat exire ad viridiarium fratrum et infirmatorium dicti conventus.

[41] Interrogatus si aliqua durtia facta fuit eidem fratri Arnaldo seu restrictio cibi vel potus, respondit quod non. Et mansit in dicta camera per aliquos dies. Et postmodum, ad preces domini regis et ob reverentiam Sedis Apostolice, relaxavit eum libere a dicta camera et detentione, ut posset exercere negotia domini Pape.

[42] Interrogatus dictus testis super tercio articulo predicte inquisitionis, qui incipit: «Item, quod dictus frater Petrus vicarius, spretis» etc., respondit suo iuramento quod nunquam audivit dictum fratrem Jacobum appellasse nec ante incarcerationem nec post.

[43] Interrogatus si predicta dixit amore vel precio aliquo, vel precibus, vel timore, vel odio, respondit quod non, sed pro sola veritate testificatus est secundum ea que scit.

²¹ in introitu camere] in introitu camere exp. MS

[55] Interrogatus dictus testis super primo articulo dicte inquisitionis, qui incipit: «In primis, quod frater Petrus de Castro» etc., respondit suo sacramento quod ipse vicarius personaliter accessit ad cameram quam inhabitabat frater Arnaldus de Fabricis, Apostolice Sedis nuntius, et ab eo requisivit plures quam quater fratrem Jacobum de Fargis, qui fuerat extractus per ipsum fratrem Arnaldum et dominum Petrum de Manso de carcere per violentiam. Et cum dictus frater Arnaldus nole~~r~~t sibi restituere dictum fratrem Jacobum, finaliter iussit vicarius predictus clientibus armatis, quos habebat secum, ut frangerent portam camere prediche. Qua aperta, cuperunt fratrem Jacobum predictum et reduxerunt eum ad carcerem.

[56] Interrogatus si intulerunt violentiam dictis nuntiis vel rebus eorum, respondit quod non, sed evaginaverunt gladios in introitu camere,²¹ credentes aliquos armatos esse intus qui vellent repugnare, tamen nullum percusserunt.

[57] Interrogatus quis extraxerat fratrem Jacobum de carcere, respondit quod dominus Petrus de Manso et frater Arnaldus abstulerunt violenter clavim carceris de cingulo fratris Johannis de Sabaudia et aperuerunt et extraxerunt fratrem Jacobum de dicto carcere.

[58] Interrogatus, quando extraxerunt eum, quo duxerunt, responderunt²² quod ad infirmatorium conventus. Et dictus frater Jacobus legit, in presentia ipsorum nuntiorum et aliquorum fratrum et familiarium domus, de quorum nominibus non recordatur, quandam cartam seu scripturam, sed quid contineretur in dicta scriptura nescit. Postea predicti nuntii duxerunt eum ad cameram in qua morabatur dictus frater Arnaldus.

frater Arnaldus predictus venit per se et non ductus ad locum predicatorum. Verum est quod vicarius pluries miserat pro eo ut veniret ad obedientiam Ordinis, quod facere recusavit. Et genuflectavit²⁴ se coram domino rege, petens ab eo misericordiam. Postea ipse met intravit sacristiam et in continentia precepit dictus vicarius ipsi testi et fratri Johanni de Sabaudia quod deberent eum custodire in sacristia. Et precepit dictus vicarius quod dictus frater Arnaldus duceretur ad quandam cameram pulcram et latam, precipiens eidem quod non deberet inde recedere sine licentia sua. Verumtamen non fuit ei clausa camera super eum de die, sed de nocte nescit si claudebatur. Verum est quod quando veniebant seculares qui vellent secum loqui, ponebantur duo custodes ne aliqui ingredierentur dictam cameram.

[64] Interrogatus ad quid fuit ductus ad cameram illam, respondit: ut esset ibi arestatus propter excessus commissos et violentias illatas Ordini.

[66] Interrogatus si facta fuit sibi restrictio cibi vel potus, respondit quod non.

[67] Interrogatus si erat durus carcer, respondit quod non erat durus carcer, ymmo erat quedam pulcra camera que fuerat edificata in dicto conventu pro domino rege.

[72] Interrogatus dictus testis super tercio articulo, qui incipit: «Item, quod dictus frater Petrus vicarius, spretis» etc., respondit suo sacramento quod numquam audivit ipsum fratrem Jacobum appellasse.

Et convenientibus fratibus, proposuit dominus Petrus in capitulo quomodo indigebat fratre Jacobo de Fargis pro aliquibus negotiis, qui detinebatur in carcere. Et vicarius respondit: «Ego deliberabo et statim respondebo vobis.» Et dixit fratibus quod sequentur eum ad ecclesiam. Aliqui secuti sunt eum et aliqui remanserunt cum fratre Arnaldo. Et dum vicarius rediret, volens respondere nuntiis, dictus frater Arnaldus, non expectata responsione ipsius, ivit versus carcerem, precipiens fratibus quod sequentur eum. Et abstulit violenter clavim carceris fratri Johanni de Sabaudia. Et tunc aperuerunt dicti nuntii carcerem, et extraxerunt fratrem Jacobum predictum, et conduxerunt eum ad cameram in qua morabatur frater Arnaldus predictus. Postea, post completorium, misit vicarius aliquos fratres ad dictam cameram ut dicti nuntii dimitterent sibi fratrem Jacobum. Qui noluerunt sibi mittere dictum fratrem.

[79] Interrogatus si fecerunt vel fecit dictus vicarius aperiri portam dicte camere per dictos homines armatos, respondit quod sic, et accepit dictum fratrem Jacobum.

[80] Interrogatus quo duxerunt eum, respondit: ad quendam locum dicte domus in quo incluserunt eum.

[81] Interrogatus si dictus vicarius perturbavit nuntios in executione negotiorum apostolicorum, respondit quod nescit.

[82] Interrogatus dictus testis super secundo articulo dicte inquisitionis, qui incipit: «Item, quod postmodum» etc., respondit quod non vidit dictum fratrem Arnaldum capi. Verum est quod in festo Beati Stephani venit per se ipsum gratis dictus frater Arnaldus et prostravit se coram domino rege, qui erat in choro ecclesie. Et dominus rex dixit sibi: «Vadatis ad Ordinem et obedientiam ipsius.» Et postea, in fine misse, rex rogavit vicarium ut faceret gratiam dicto fratri Arnaldo amore suo, et si non in toto, saltem in parte. Et tunc fuit positus in quadam camera pulcra et regali ad pisces, carnes, et ova, et habuit socios quos voluit.

[83] Interrogatus si dicta camera stabat clausa, respondit quod nescit.

Et postea audivit dici ab aliquibus fratibus – quorum etiam nomina ignorat – quod renuntiaverat appellationi.

[90] Interrogatus si predicta retulit precio, vel precibus, timore, amicicia, vel odio, respondit quod non, sed pro sola veritate.

JAMES GASCON: TUESDAY, 9 OCTOBER

[91] Predicta die Martis frater Jacobus Vasco, Ordinis Predicatorum, vocatus in testem, comparuit coram dictis iudicibus subdelegatis. Et iuravit ad sancta Dei evangelia super toto negotio predicte inquisitionis et articulis ipsius et aliis predictis annexis, quibus dicti iudices eum interogaverint, meram et puram dicere veritatem, remotis precio, precibus, timore, odio, et amore.

[92] Interrogatus dictus testis iuratus super primo articulo dicte inquisitionis, qui incipit: «In primis quod dictus frater Petrus de Castro» etc., suo sacramento respondit quod numquam vidit dictum vicarium ire ad domum quam inhabitarent dicti nuntii in villa Nicosie. Sed verum est quod dictus vicarius ivit ad cameram in qua morabatur frater Arnaldus in conventu Fratrum Predicatorum Nicosiensium et requisivit ab eo ut restitueret sibi fratrem Jacobum de Fargis, quem extraxerat de carcere et detinebat in dicta camera. [93] Interrogatus si dicti clientes erant armati, respondit quod non quod viderit.

[96] Interrogatus si perturbavit nuntios predictos in executione negotiorum apostolicorum, respondit quod non.

[97] Interrogatus si dominus Petrus de Manso erat tunc in dicta camera, respondit quod sic, sed non habitabat ibi.

[98] Interrogatus super secundo articulo inquisitionis, qui incipit: «Item, quod postmodum dictus frater Petrus de Castro, vicarius prelibatus» etc., respondit vera non esse in articulo comprehensa. Sed verum est quod die Sancti Stephani frater Arnaldus per se venit ad locum Predicatorum et prostravit se coram domino rege, petens ut intercederet pro ipso penes vicarium. Et finita missa, rex, convocatis fratribus, rogavit vicarium ut faceret misericordiam et iusticiam dicto fratri Arnaldo. Postea dictus frater Arnaldus venit ad capitulum et ibi dixit culpas suas. Et dixit, «Quicquid feci, feci de capite meo et non ex parte Pape.» Postea ductus fuit ad quandam pulcrum cameram.

[102] Interrogatus si positi fuerunt aliqui custodes ex patre vicarii ad dictam cameram, respondit quod sic, videlicet frater Raimundus Saraceni, tunc subprior, et frater Elias.

[103]. Interrogatus si²⁵ poterat ire quo volebat, respondit: [12r] non extra locum, sed bene per viridarium et locum, quia vicarius iam revocaverat dictum preceptum. Et post x dies fuit relaxatus dictus frater Arnaldus.

[106] Interrogatus qua de causa et ad quid positus fuit in dicta camera, respondit: ut esset arrestatus ibi propter excessus quos commiserat.

[107] Interrogatus super tercio articulo dicte inquisitionis, qui incipit: «Item, quod dictus frater Petrus vicarius, spretis» etc., respondit quod numquam scivit nec audivit dictum fratrem Jacobum appellasse, nec ante incarcerationem neque post.

Et cum nolent restituere nec aperire portam camere, precepit vicarius predictus clientibus armatis quos habebat secum ut frangerent hostium dicte camere, qua aperta, fecit capi fratrem Jacobum et reduxit eum ad unum carcerem.

[111] Interrogatus a²⁷ quibus fuerat idem frater Jacobus extractus de carcere, respondit quod dominus Petrus de Manso et frater Arnaldus, Apostolice Sedis nuntii, fuerunt in capitulo dicti conventus et pecierunt fratrem Jacobum de Fargis, qui erat in carcere, ex gratia primo, postea ex parte domini Pape. Et cum vicarius nolent eis dare, exiverunt, capitulum et pecierunt et preceperunt ex parte domini Pape et sub pena excommunicationis dicto testi ut eis daret clavim dicti carceris. credit quod esset durus carcer, nisi in tantum quia prohibitum erat sibi loqui cum aliquo et alii secum. Et quidam peregrini veniebant petendo absolutio-nem ab eo et non poterant sibi loqui. Et tamen erant aliqui alii fratres <ar>restati qui erant in durioribus cameris.

[123] Interrogatus super tercio articulo inquisitionis, qui incipit: «Item, quod dictus frater Petrus vicarius, spretis» etc., respondit suo sacramento quod quando frater Jacobus de Fargis extractus fuit de carcere per dictos nuntios, audivit propriis auribus eum viva voce appellare et jussit de hoc fieri instrumentum per Magistrum Raimundum ante secundam incarcerationem. Sed dixit quod post xv dies audivit quosdam fratres dicentes dicto fratri Jacobo: «Revoca! Revoca appellationem, etiam quia vicarius faciet tibi misericordiam.» Et tunc revocavit dictus frater Jacobus appellationem ipsam in manibus dicti vicarii, presentibus dicto teste et fratre Anselmo de Silvano et aliis fratribus <de> quorum nominibus non recordatur.

RICHARD THE ENGLISHMAN: FRIDAY, 12 OCTOBER

[126] Die Veneris duodecimo dicti mensis Octobris comparuit coram supradictis iudicibus subdelegatis frater Ricardus Anglicus, Ordinis Fratrum Predicatorum, vocatus in testem. Et iuravit ad sancta Dei evangelia super toto negotio predicte inquisitionis et articulis ipsius sibi lectis et aliis anexis et dependentibus a predictis, quibus eum dicti iudices interrogaverint, meram et puram dicere veritatem, remotis precio, precibus, timore, odio, et amore.

[127] Interrogatus dictus frater Ricardus testis iuratus super primo articulo inquisitionis, qui incipit: «In primis quod dictus frater Petrus de Castro» etc., respondit suo sacramento quod dictus frater Petrus de Castro vicarius introduxit aliquos armatos in claustrum Fratrum Predicatorum Nicosiensium. Et ipsis ibi expectantibus, idem vicarius misit aliquos fratres dicti Ordinis ad cameram fratris Arnaldi de Fabricis et domini Petri de Manso, nuntiorum Sedis Apostolice, acceptam ex parte domini nostri Pape, ut ipsi redderent fratrem Jacobum de Fargis, condemnatum³⁰ carceri per ipsum vicarium et diffinitorem Ordinis. Ipsi responderunt quod habebant ex parte domini nostri Pape aliqua per eum inquirere secundum quandam decretalem «De falsariis»³¹ allegatam per eos, et eo peracto negotio, ipsum redderent indilate. Predictus quidem vicarius, isti responsioni non acquiescens, sed cum fratribus ad dictam cameram procedens, predictum fratrem Jacobum ab eis requisivit. Quibus respondentibus ut prius, et inhibitibus ex parte domini nostri Summi Pontificis quod cameram non tangerent, et non obstantibus persuasionibus fratrum propter scandalum imminens, ad ipsam cameram homines armatos induxit et portam frangi precepit. Qui, completes eius preceptum, cameram intraverunt, et predictum fratrem Jacobum violenter extraxerunt, et ipsum iussu predicti vicarii ad carcerem Ordinis deduxerunt.

[128] Interrogatus qualiter scit predicta, respondit quia vidit et presens fuit.

[129] Interrogatus si hostiliter vel quo animo accessit dictus vicarius ad cameram, respondit quod suum non est iudicare de animo.

[131] Interrogatus si dominus Petrus de Manso et frater Arnaldus habitabant ambo in dicta camera, respondit quod bene tunc habitabant, tamen non continue, nec vidit dominum Petrum morantem ibi alia nocte quam illa.

[132] Interrogatus quis extraxerat fratrem Jacobum de priori carcere, respondit quod frater Arnaldus et dominus Petrus fecerunt ad capitulum pulsari. Et congregatis fratribus in eodem capitulo, requisiverunt predictum vicarium quod eis daret fratrem Jacobum de Fargis, ut per eum possent inquirere aliqua que circumstabant mandatum papale. Ipso respondente non debere eis tradere, predicti nuntii preceperunt notario ut faceret eis instrumentum de predicta negatione. Facta autem altercatione inter predictos nuntios et vicarium, preceperunt nuntii ut articulos quos habebat dictus notarius legeret contra vicarium. Et sic contentionе suscitata inter eos, precepta volabant ex parte utriusque: nuntii ex parte domini nostri Pape precipiebant fratribus ut eis obedirent, vicarius econtra ut sibi obedirent. Facta longa concertatione, dispersi sunt fratres. Et tunc frater Arnaldus una cum predicto domino Petro ad ministrum predicti fratris Jacobi accesserunt et frater Arnaldus clavem carceris a predicto ministro [13v] recepit et hostium carceris aperuit. Si ipsi extraxerunt eum vel non, nescit. Sed audavit dici quod unus notarius qui erat cum dictis nuntiis ipsum vocavit et ipse exivit.

[134] Interrogatus si aliqua bona vel littere papales erant in dicta camera, respondit quod audavit dici quod sic.

[135] Interrogatus si perturbavit nuntios in executione negotiorum apostolicorum, respondit quod in quantum detinuit fratrem Arnaldum eos a negotiis papalibus impedivit.

[136] Interrogatus si dicti nuntii protestati fuerunt tunc quod ibi in camera illa esset thesaurus domini Pape, respondit quod ipse audivit propriis auribus fratrem Arnaldum protestantem, «Hic est thesaurus et bona et scripture domini Pape.»

[137] Interrogatus si datum fuit aliquod dampnum rebus vel bonis ibi existentibus, respondit quod nescit nec audivit.

[138] Interrogatus super secundo articulo dicte inquisitionis, qui sic incipit: «Item, quod postmodum dictus frater Petrus de Castro, vicarius prelibatus» etc., respondit quod die Sancti Stephani idem frater Arnaldus venit de domo Hospitalis ad ecclesiam Fratrum Predicatorum et genuflexit se coram domino rege existente in choro dicte ecclesie, preces effundendo ut ipse pro eo fratres rogaret. Et rex rogavit vicarium pro eo. Et vicarius precepit ipsum ad sacristiam duci. Et peracta missa et rege recedente, de consilio aliorum ad quandam cameram predictum fratrem Arnaldum duci precepit.

[139] Interrogatus qui duxerunt eum, respondit quod fratres aliqui dicti Ordinis.

[140] Interrogatus si posuerunt manus in eum, respondit quod non.

[142] Interrogatus si mansit continue clausa, respondit se credere firmiter quod non fuerit continue clausa.

[143] Interrogatus si vidit fratrem Arnaldum unquam cameram predictam exire, respondit quod sic, et quod vidit eum ire per ortum de licentia vicarii, sine qua non poterat exire.

[144] Interrogatus si vicarius fecit ipsum duro carceri mancipari, respondit quod in tantum putat ipsum duro carceri mancipatum in quantum non potuit et sub precepto habuit ut nisi de licentia vicarii non exiret nec fratribus colloqui prout vellat.³² Sed nullam aliam duriciem habuit, neque de ferris neque de restrictione cibi vel potus quod sciat vel audiverit.

³² The meaning is clear, but the grammar and syntax are poor.

[146] Interrogatus quanto tempore stetit in dicta camera ita arestatus, respondit quod nescit.

[147] Interrogatus si scit quod ad noticiam vicarii pervenerit illa constitutio de qua fit mentio in litteris apostolicis, respondit se nescire, sed dixit quod bene audivit fratrem Arnaldum qui dixit in capitulo vicario, «Vos non habetis potestatem super me,» sed utrum allegaverit constitutionem, ignorat.

[148] Interrogatus ad quid positus fuit frater Arnaldus predictus in dicta camera, respondit: ut esset ibi arestatus et incaceratus. [14r]

[149] Interrogatus dictus testis super tercio articulo inquisitionis, qui incipit: «Item, quod dictus frater Petrus vicarius, spretis etc., suo sacramento respondit quod audivit a fratribus quibusdam – <de> quorum nominibus non recordatur – quod frater Jacobus appellavit ad Sedem Apostolicam quando carcerem exivit, notario presente et aliis, non tamen audivit suis auribus dictum fratrem Jacobum appellare.

[150] Interrogatus si scit quod ad noticiam vicarii pervenerit de hac appellatione emissa prout audivit dici a dictis fratribus, respondit: non asserit quod sic, sed credit, quia secundum relata fratrum – <de> quorum nominibus non recordatur – dictus vicarius fecit dictum fratrem Jacobum mutari de loco superiori ad inferiorem et appellationem revocari, non quod dictus testis viderit predicta, sed audivit sic dici a dictis fratribus.

[151] Interrogatus si predicta retulit precio, vel precibus, timore, vel amicicia, seu amore, vel odio, respondit quod nequaquam, sed pro sola veritate predicta omnia dixit.

[160] Interrogatus si fuit mandatum dicto fratri Arnaldo quod non exiret dictam cameram sine licentia vicarii, respondit quod bene poterat exire ad infirmatorium, sed non ad claustrum et aliam partem conventus, <et>³⁵ prohibitum fuit sibi ex parte vicarii ne loqueretur cui vellet.

[261] Interrogatus dictus frater Simon testis iuratus super primo articulo inquisitionis, qui incipit: «In primis quod dictus frater Petrus de Castro» etc., suo sacramento respondit quod ipse [18v] vicarius accessit cum⁴⁰ hominibus armatis ad cameram fratris Arnaldi, que est infra septa domus Fratrum Predicotorum, domino Petro de Manso existente tunc in dicta camera, tamen non habitabat ibi continue. Et cum prius misisset fratres ad rogandum ipsos nuntios ut redderent sibi fratrem Jacobum de Fargis, et ipsemet vicarius pluries rogasset eos, et ipsi nole<re>nt red<d>ere, iussit dictus vicarius frangi hostium dicte camere. Et intravit cameram cum predictis armatis hominibus et fecit capi fratrem Jacobum predictum. Verum est quod ipse dixit clientibus, «Non capiatis fratrem Arnaldum, quia ille non est, sed capiatis istum,» videlicet fratrem Jacobum, nam clientes volebant capere fratrem Arnaldum. Et fecit dictum fratrem Jacobum duci ad carcerem.

[262] Interrogatus si hostiliter vel quo animo accessit dictus vicarius, respondit: non credit quod iverit ad nocendum nuntiis, sed tantum causa recuperandi fratrem Jacobum fugitivum.

[263] Interrogatus si frater Arnaldus protestatus fuit quod ibi essent bona et thesaurus domini Pape, respondit quod ipse audivit propriis auribus fratrem Arnaldum sic protestantem: «Hic est thesaurus, bona, et scripture domini nostri Pape.» Et quando intraverunt dicti homines cameram, invenerunt notarios, videlicet Magistrum Arnaldum et Rainaldum, legentes quasdam scripturas factas in papiro, et ipsas⁴¹ vidiit ipse testis. Tamen quid contineretur in eis nescit, sed credit quod erant protestationes et appellations.

festo Sancti Stephani venit sponte ad locum Fratrum Predicatorum, et salutavit dominum regem, et recomendavit se sibi. Et dominus rex recomendavit eum fratibus et rogavit pro eo. Postea ductus fuit dictus frater Arnaldus in sacristiam. Non vidit ipse testis eum quando venit in ecclesiam, sed in sacristia vidit eum et fuit locutus ei diuicius. Et postea ipse testis recessit de conventu. Quid factum fuerit de dicto fratre Arnaldo nescit, sed postea, quando rediit, invenit ipsum esse in una camera in qua potuit libere intrare, et intravit. Et post quatuor vel v dies clauserunt portam camere et predictus vicarius precepit in virtute sancte obedientie quod nullus loqueretur eidem fratri Arnaldo nisi de licentia sua. Nichilominus dedit ei servitorem quem peciit, videlicet fratrem Elyam, qui iacebat in camera cum eo, et de nocte eos includebant.

[270] Interrogatus si camera illa fuit sibi deputata ad carcerem, respondit quod ad detentionem, prout credit, nec fuit sibi facta aliqua restrictio cibi vel potus.

[271] Interrogatus si fuit aliquid gravamen factum in persona dicti fratris Arnaldi, respondit quod nescit, nec credit.

[272] Interrogatus si scit quod ad noticiam vicarii pervenerit de constitutione illa domini Pape propter quam vicarius non haberet potestatem supra dictum fratrem Arnaldum, respondit [19r] quod audivit fratrem Arnaldum allegantem illam constitutionem et ostendit ipsi testi principium constitutionis illius in uno parvo libello. Nec credit quod ibi esset tota illa constitutio, maxime cum quesiverit eam a domino episcopo Paphensi.

[273] Interrogatus dictus testis super tercio articulo dicte inquisitionis, qui incipit: «Item, quod dictus frater Petrus vicarius, spretis» etc., respondit quod ipse audivit dici a dicto fratre Jacobo quod ipse appellaverat ad dominum Papam. Et hoc fuit in cella fratris Roberti de Sancto Dionisio, ubi dictus frater Jacobus locutus fuit cum dicto teste et fratre Roberto predicto. Non tamen audivit ipsum appellantem. Quantum est de carcere, dicit quod vicarius fecit eum tradi duro carcere, immo durissimo.

[274] Interrogatus si predicta retulit odio, vel amore, vel precibus aliquorum, vel si aliquid recepit ut predicta diceret, vel si timore alicuius, respondit quod nullo predictorum, sed tantum pro sola veritate retulit et respondit secundum ea que scivit.

[285] Nuper siquidem ad nostri apostolatus pervenit auditum quod Petrus de Castro, Ordinis Fratrum Predicotorum vicarius in provincia Terre Sancte, sedem eandem offendere in sue salutis anime dispendium non formidans, cum nonnullis armatis hominibus domum quam inhabitabant in civitate Nicosiensi dilecti filii Petrus de Manso, cantor ecclesie Burgensis, et Arnaldus de Fabricis Ordinis predicti, memorate Sedis nuntii per nos dudum ad partes transmarinas pro certis nostris et Ecclesie Romane negotiis destinati, hostiliter accedere, dictamque domum, in qua prelibati nuntii nonnulla bona nostra et eiusdem Ecclesie necnon litteras apostolicas et scripta publica et privata tangentia dicta negotia conservabant, invadere non expavit, nuntios ipsos, quos honorare et confovere pro nostra et dicte sedis reverentia tenebatur, odii persequendo fomite, molestando multipliciter et in executione negotiorum huiusmodi perturbando; demumque dictum Arnaldum, in quem obsistente constitutione nostra olim edita, per quam districtius duximus inhibendum ut nullus ordinarius aut inquisitor heretice pravitatis seu quivis aliis contra officiales aut nuntios Apostolice Sedis procedere absque nostra speciali licentia presumeret quoquomodo, ex tunc decernendo nichilominus quicquid in contrarium attemptari continget irritum et inane, necnon et, prorumpendo in offensam ulterius dicte sedis, dilectum filium Jacobum de Fargis, olim Fratrum eiusdem Ordinis provincialem dicte⁴⁴ provincie priorem, spretis et in contemptum deductis appellationibus quas idem Jacobus ab [20v] eodem vicario et etiam contra ipsum ad sedem eandem interposuerat, capi fecit et duro carceri mancipari.

[286] Nos itaque, tot et tam enormes excessus nolentes – sicut etiam nec debemus, si relatis in hac parte suffragetur veritas – relinquere incorrectos, fraternitati vestre per apostolica scripta committimus et mandamus quatinus vos vel alter vestrum per vos vel alium seu alios, super predictis et ea tangentibus summarie, simpliciter, et de plano ac sine strepitu et figura iudicii informantes, si ea vel eorum aliqua repereritis veritate fulciri, prefatum vicarium peremptorie citare curetis ut infra quatuor mensium spatium post citationem predictam apostolico conspectui personaliter se presentet super predictis responsurus et facturus quod suadebit iusticia et prout demeruit recepturus. Diem vero citationis et formam et quicquid super premissis duxeritis faciendum nobis per vestras litteras harum seriem continentes fideliter rescribere nullatenus omittatis.

[287] Datum Avinione, III Idus Maii, pontificatus nostri anno quartodecimo.

[288] Unde, cum nos pro quibusdam negotiis arduis ad eundem dominum nostrum Summum Pontificem et dictam Sedem Apostolicam et ad partes ultramarinas oporteat proficisci, ita quod ad cognitionem et decisionem cause predice necnon officii⁴⁵ inquisitionis explendi nobis in hac parte commissi intendere comode non valemus, de circumspectione atque industria vestra plenam in Domino fiduciam obtinentes, tenore presentium committimus causam et officium inquisitionis antedictam audiendam, cognoscendam, et fine debito terminandam, subdelegantes necnon etiam committentes vobis in hac parte totaliter vices nostras prout et sicut a domino nostro Summo Pontifice habemus in mandatis. In quorum omnium testimonium sigillum nostrum presentibus litteris duximus apponendum.

LATER STAGES: BISHOPS MARK OF FAMAGUSTA AND TORTOSA AND MATTHEW OF BEIRUT

[290] Postea vero nos, iudices delegatus et subdelegatus predicti, intendere volentes ad executionem supradicti mandati, ad predictum locum Fratrum Predicotorum accessimus et dictum fratrem Petrum vocari fecimus coram nobis. In eius presentia legi fecimus litteras apostolicas antedictas et articulos per nos formatos, super quibus inquirere intendebamus ad

plenariam informationem de contentis in ipsis. Et ipsum, tactis sacrosanctis evangeliis, iurare fecimus de contentis in ipsis litteris et articulis plenam et meram dicere veritatem. Et eius dictum recepimus, et in scriptis per nostrum notarium iuratum redigi mandavimus in dictis nostris actis. Deinde processimus ad testium examinationem, quorum attestations sub eorum sacramento deposite in predictis actis nostris seriatim plenius continentur. Et cum vellemus ad aperturam et publicationem dictarum attestationum procedere, dictus frater Petrus in nostra presentia constitutus dixit et protestatus fuit quod salvum esset sibi et reservatum ius opponendi et dicendi tam contra personas quam contra dicta testium predictorum. Qua protestatione admissa, attestations predictas aperuimus et publicavimus et ipsas pro apertis et publicatis haberi iussimus. Post quam aperturam et publicationem interrogavimus fratrem Petrum predictum ibidem presentem et intelligentem si volebat aliquid opponere et dicere contra personas et dicta testium prefatorum, quod⁴⁶ nos eidem faceremus tradi copiam de attestationibus antedictis. Qui frater Petrus respondit quod, cum ipse iam [21r] proposuerat, quam cicius posset, Sedem Apostolicam visitare et domini nostri Summi Pontificis se conspectui presentare, et credens ibi veritatem invenire plenariam, se excusare intendebat secundum veritatem et Deum, Qui est ipsa Veritas, de relatis contra ipsum eidem domino nostro Summo Pontifici, de quibus videtur esse contra veritatem quamplurimum informatus, ideo nolebat dictum negotium hic protrahere nec elongare, sed ius quod sibi competit opponendi et dicendi contra personas dictorum testium et dicta eorum proponere et prosequi suis loco et tempore intendebat. Et ideo in protestatione sua sibi dictum ius reservabat. Cui protestationi adhuc adherebat et eam in quantum poterat confirmabat. Quibus attestationibus et dicto predicti fratris Petri diligenter per nos inspectis et examinatis, quia per ipsas attestations et dictum nobis constituit, informatione habita super hiis, quod dictus frater Petrus vicarius prelibatus aliquos de excessibus contentis in eisdem litteris ipsius domini nostri Summi Pontificis commisit – videlicet invasionem cum armatis hominibus domus seu camere quam inhabitabat frater Arnaldus de Fabricis, Ordinis Fratrum Predicitorum, Apostolice Sedis nuntius in partibus cismarinis, domino Petro de Manso eiusdem collega simul cum eo tunc in dicta camera existente, et insuper predictum fratrem Petrum vicarium carceri mancipasse fratrem Arnaldum nuntium prelibatum – eundem fratrem Petrum invenimus fore citandum secundum mandatum apostolicum nobis in hac parte decretum. Et ideo ipsum fratrem Petrum in nostra presentia constitutum citare curavimus et citavimus sub forma infrascripta, in presentia et testimonio plurium fide dignorum ibidem per nos specialiter convocatorum et congregatorum, quorum nomina inferius describuntur.
